Senior Theresa Lorenzi has scored more points (2,173) for Bloomsburg University than any other person. Coach Joe Bressi's women's basketball team posted a perfect regular season (26-0) and finished with a 28-2 record.

Improvement is goal of assessment

(Editor's Note: This is the final article of a three-part series highlighting current university issues which have been identified as important national concerns — alcohol and drug abuse, affirmative action and assessment.)

Assessment is an integral part of our daily lives. The simple act of looking in a mirror to assess appearance is one of dozens of assessment activities we routinely perform every day. Assessment provides feedback for improvement and is part of a continuous loop: assessment — change — improvement — and back again to assessment. Improvement is the real goal of this process.

During this decade, assessment has been a key item on the national education agenda. At the beginning of the decade, hard questions were being asked about school and student performance at the elementary and secondary level. In response to those questions, statewide standardized tests, assessment tests, were imposed in all 50 states. By mid-decade, attention turned to higher education, and by 1983, 43 percent of public colleges and universities were operating under a state mandate to have assessment procedures.

AUSPRICH

Pennsylvania has not mandated assessment testing at the post-secondary level. However, many institutions, including Bloomsburg University, have assessment programs.

At Bloomsburg University, we are dedicated to the development of a broad-based, comprehensive assessment program that is consistent with the strategic plan of the university and reflects the institution's mission and goals. In our assessment program, special emphasis is placed on student learning and development, the effectiveness of university programs and services, and the impact of the university on the society that it services. We believe the primary focus of assessment is outcomes, and its purpose is the improvement of the university and the strengthening of its programs.

In response to recommendations that arose through the university's self-study process, I appointed an Assessment Planning Task Force in June 1988. Though this is a new task force at Bloomsburg University, assessment has been a key element in our thinking for many years, dating back to 1973 when our first planning commission was formed. The purpose of the Assessment Planning Task Force is to give direction and substance to our assessment activities. It provides a way for those campus leaders most directly involved with activities or programs subject to assessment to meet together at one place, at one time, and thus enables us to coordinate our activities better.

enables us to coordinate our activities better.

This spring, the task force will be receiving and taking action on the recommendations that will be forthcoming from the University-Wide Undergraduate Student Outcomes Assessment Committee. Over the past two years, this committee has been developing a plan for assessing outcomes as a consequence of students' exposure to the curriculum. Their focus has been on the cognitive development (knowledge and skills) and noncognitive development (personal and interpersonal skills) of students.

Another committee that will be reporting to the task force is the Institutional Effect and Effectiveness Committee. This committee will parallel the student outcomes committee but will focus on support services and how these services help meet student needs.

The work of both of these committees is important because through assessment we can determine what our students are learning, how our teaching affects that learning, and the long-term impact and benefits our students have received by attending Bloomsburg University. To facilitate this, assessment needs to be an actual part of the learning process.

Bloomsburg is in the enviable position of approaching assessment from a position of strength. We have always valued good teaching and believe that teaching and teachers are central to our mission. Assessment prompts greater attention to what students can do with what they know and is a tool we can use to make changes for the better — for our students and for our university.

Greek system changing direction

(Editor's Note: The following open letter to BU Greek alumni was written by Dr. Jerrold A. Griffiths, vice president for student life.)

Our Greek system is now over twenty years old and has grown to twenty chapters. It has changed considerably over those years and an update is in order since many of you have written to us recently and have indicated that you are unaware of the significant changes that have occurred.

The Greek system on our campus has been and continues to be an integral part of both campus life and the development of our students. It has been a positive force in many ways for the University and particularly for our students. The system still continues to attract about twenty percent of our student body, many of whom are leaders in other student activities as well — just as you were as undergraduates. In short, we are proud of many of the strong and rich traditions of Greek life, which were initiated by our alumni and have helped to mold your careers. However, some things must change.

Our goal at Bloomsburg University is to continue to build on the solid foundation of Greek life which you helped to create and establish. In 1987, we hired a full-time Greek coordinator, Ms. Lori Barsness, to assist in this effort, and she has brought us many new ideas. Student leaders in the Greek system have worked hard to implement a necessary change in direction of the Greek system. It has not all been an easy transition, but we know major change is difficult for any of us.

On several campuses throughout the nation, the value of the Greek system is being scrutinized. As we have read in newspapers, several colleges and universities have taken action to abolish entire systems. Most of them had an older and stronger Greek tradition than we do, but they still collapsed because they were unable, or unwilling, to see that these are changing times in higher education.

I am pleased to report that this is not the case at Bloomsburg. We have established a Greek Advisory Board to discuss and help resolve problems associated with rushing and pledging. In addition to our regular meetings with the Inter-Fraternity Council and Inter-Sorority Council, we have been meeting with the presidents of sororities and fraternities. The results of these efforts have been positive as we attempt to see how the Greek system fits into today's academic community and to address the new laws adopted by our state legislature regarding hazing and underage drinking.

There are many activities which took place when you were undergraduates that are now under careful scrutiny or have been eliminated. Following several tragic and catastrophic pledging incidents throughout the country and in Pennsylvania, a new anti-hazing law was passed and enacted by the General Assembly in Harrisburg in April 1987, and we have taken it very seriously.

Award nominations invited

On January 1, 1989, the bell in Carver Tower pealed 150 times to commemorate the beginning of the Sesquicentennial Celebration of Bloomsburg University with the theme — "A Legacy of Learning." Many events have been planned for this year-long celebration as you will see on the calendar of events in The Quarterly.

As we celebrate our 150th and look to our 200th birthday, we wish to involve each of you as we honor outstanding alumni of Bloomsburg University. Each year on Alumni Weekend, the Alumni Association awards up to three Distinguished Service Awards and two Young Alumni Awards, as well as Honorary Alumni Awards. Although the awardees have been selected for 1989, we are reaching out to you for nominees for the 1990 and beyond.

Our alumni live in every state of the union—over 31,000 strong! Since it is impossible for us to be aware of the accomplishments of each of you, we are asking you to help us. Perhaps you have kept in touch with a deserving classmate, or you may know a potential nominee who lives in your area. Please take a few minutes to bring these individuals to our attention by completing the nomination form found elsewhere in this Quarterly.

KLEMKOSKY

found elsewhere in this Quarterly.

We also ask you to be a little bit immodest! Perhaps you haven't kept in touch with anyone at Bloomsburg, and no one knows about your accomplishments. Don't hesitate to "blow your own horn" by nominating yourself!

After a nomination form is received, the nominee may be requested to send additional information to us. In this way, we hope to have a large number of nominees from which to choose.

Distinguished Service Awards and the Young Alumni Awards are awarded on the basis of the following criteria: Service to Bloomsburg University and/or Alumni Association; professional involvements/accomplishments; and/or contributions to community/humanity. Young Alumni Awards are given to individuals who have graduated within the past 25 years and who have demonstrated the potential for greater accomplishments and/or contributions.

Honorary Alumni Awards are given to non-graduates who have demonstrated exceptional loyalty to the University and/or the Alumni Association through his/her service.

Please don't overlook this opportunity to give recognition to deserving alumni. While it's fresh in your mind, use the nomination form in this quarterly. Nominees for 1990 awards will be accepted until August 1, 1989.

We're counting on you! Make your nomination today!

$3.5 million campaign in 'silent' stage

Bloomsgurg University has never been a place that sits by idly, watching others progress. This is evidenced by the call for a $3.5 million dollar campaign that will be announced this fall.

"This major fundraising effort is required if Bloomsgurg University is to continue to be a strong university, one committed to excellence in the quality of its students, the calibre of its faculty, and the depth and breadth of its studies," said Anthony M. Ianiero, director of development and executive director of the BU Foundation.

IANIERO

"In looking to the future, the university is introducing plans that when fulfilled will carry Bloomsgurg into the next century as an educational leader. The Bloomsgurg University Council of Trustees and the Foundation Board of Directors have authorized a development program, apart from annual giving, to raise $3.5 million over the next five years."

"The Sesquicentennial Campaign for Bloomsgurg" calls for a commitment to education," said President Harry Ausprich, "and it is as exciting as it is ambitious. This is the first campaign of this magnitude to be undertaken by Bloomsgurg University. As a state-owned university, it is often assumed that funds are available as needed. This simply is not accurate. To continue to maintain our 'margin of excellence,' we must seek additional funding from our alumni, parents and friends."

PHASE ONE of the campaign, $1 million for library enhancement, will benefit the Harvey A. Andruss Library. According to J. Daniel Vann, director of library services, "The library is a responsive and integral part of the university. The students and faculty who choose this school rightfully expect the library to be a comprehensive learning environment that fulfills their academic needs. Phase One will strengthen the library with updated special collections, technologies, equipment and programs."

Over $657,000 has already been pledged or donated toward the $1 million goal. This includes a five-year pledge of $250,000 from the Community Government Association, and a joint gift of $100,000 from William and Jane Gittler, Class of 1972, and Catawissa Lumber and Specialty Company. (See story on page 5.)

PHASE TWO of the campaign will increase the funds available for student scholarships. Over $626,000 has been received toward its $1 million goal, including the previously announced gift of $500,000 from the Mitrani Foundation.

PHASE THREE has a goal of $1.5 million for academic excellence. Funds donated in this area will support faculty development, equipment, named professorships, and outstanding research and teaching awards. To date, $531,500 has been pledged or donated, including the Magee Mansion valued at $426,500.

The Alumni Board of Directors has endorsed a $500,000 goal from our alumni for this campaign. "As alumni we are very familiar with all Bloomsgurg University has to offer," said Mary Anne Klemkosky, alumni board president. "We also know that there are areas that would benefit from additional assistance. The primary objective of this campaign is to strengthen Bloomsgurg University's existing educational commitments, facilities and resources. We anticipate a strong show of support from our alumni as we begin this first-ever comprehensive campaign."

This campaign will be conducted concurrently with the Annual Fund. Alumni will be asked to give above and beyond their usual contribution. Beginning this fall and continuing through 1991, a number of BU alumni will be contacting their fellow alumni asking for support of the Sesquicentennial Campaign. Sue Mitchell Helwig '82, assistant director of development, will be spearheading the alumni campaign.

Further information about the upcoming campaign will appear in future issues of The Alumni Quarterly. Questions concerning campaign gifts or the campaign itself may be directed to the Development Office at 717-389-4128.

Gifts to BU in 1988 totalled $1.8 million

Since its reactivation in January 1986, the Bloomsgurg University Foundation has been enhancing the quality of many activities of the university through the support of private sources. These funds have been used to support student scholarships, academic equipment, employee development activities, and other projects that improve the educational environment.

"Our community and corporate friends have been most generous with their time and resources," said President Harry Ausprich. "These new relationships have developed into a strong base from which new development initiatives will grow."

"The members of the foundation board are grateful they have been able to supplement the educational activities of the university for the benefit of everyone. Dependence on state funding and student fees alone does not allow the fullest expression of the opportunity that we want for our students and employees," said Anthony M. Ianiero, director of development.

In 1988 a total of $1,862,419 was raised by the BU Foundation and Bloomsgurg University, according to Ianiero. During the same period, the arts endowment fund also grew to more than $310,000.

"This was an exceptional year," Ianiero said. "We are immensely gratified by the generosity of our alumni and many friends. This reflects the efforts of many volunteers and staff who helped make this possible. We appreciate everyone's hard work."

Ausprich noted the 140 percent increase beyond the previous year's total. "Our hopes and expectations for 1988 were not only realized, but they were surpassed, thanks to our great-hearted friends. These gifts bring fresh vitality to our spirits and will enable us to accomplish far more than we had anticipated."

The 1988 total was comprised of funds from many sources. In-kind gifts amounted to $483,918, and the Fred Smith Scholarship Fund yielded $88,905. More than 5,300 alumni contributed $211,408, and BU faculty and staff donated $17,311. The parents' fund campaign generated $22,945 which purchased more than 650 books for the library.

Other contributions included businesses and corporations, $134,449; foundations, $581,000; deferred gifts, $173,812; and miscellaneous, $73,893. Within these totals, $131,860 was specifically designated for Husky Club activities.

Two exceptionally large gifts contributed significantly to the success of the 1988 development activities: the receipt of the Magee Center on West Main Street and $500,000 from the bequest of Marco Mitrani for academic scholarships.

Disbursement of funds by the foundation board included academic scholarships, projects that directly benefit students (such as free admission to Bloomsgurg Theatre Ensemble productions), cultural arts, the Provost's Lecture Series, faculty and staff development, academic equipment, and the library. Since 1986, more than $225,000 have been allocated for these activities.

Each of these fund raising initiatives will continue in 1989. In addition, plans are underway to launch special drives for library enhancement, academic scholarships and academic enhancement.

Foundation board members represent business, industry, social services, banking, and alumni. Several BU officials are also board members.

Garson gift honors Houk

William Garson, Class of 1963, has given $25,000 to Bloomsburg University in memory of Russ Houk, who served as the university's wrestling coach for 14 seasons. The donation is the first part of a campaign to build an endowed scholarship fund of $40,000 at the university. Interest income will be used to provide financial assistance to future student athletes.

A member of Houk's 1960-1963 teams, Garson was a three-time National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) champion, a three-time Pennsylvania Conference titlist, a four-time NAIA All-American, and in 1980 was inducted into the NAIA Hall of Fame. He also became a member of the university's Hall of Fame in 1983.

GARSON

As a freshman, Garson placed fourth at heavyweight in the NAIA tournament, helping the Huskies win the national crown. A year later, he captured the 191-pound championship and Bloomsburg registered a fifth-place showing in the team race. In 1962, Garson won the 191-pound title again and led the Huskies to their second team championship in three seasons.

His outstanding collegiate career came to an end in 1963 as the Williamsport native won another title at heavyweight, performing the feat in the Huskies' Centennial Gymnasium. Bloomsburg just missed winning another team crown and finished as the national runnerup.

Along with wrestling, Garson was involved in many campus activities including several Community Government Association committees. He was also a member of the Student PSEA, Sigma Alpha Eta (the Council for Education of Exceptional Children), the Student Christian Association and Men's Resident Council.

He now serves as a state representative in the state of Washington and is president of PAACO, Inc., in Tennesse, Washington.

Houk's teams built a record of 142-34-4 in his 14 seasons as coach, and he earned national "Coach of the Year" honors on three occasions. He served three four-year terms on the U.S. Olympic Committee and served as chairman of the Olympic Wrestling Committee from 1972 to 1976. He also managed the nation's 1972 and 1976 freestyle teams.

He was inducted into the Citizen's Saving Foundation Hall of Fame, the Pennsylvania Wrestling Hall of Fame, the NAIA Hall of Fame, and the BU Hall of Fame.

Houk was also the Huskies' football coach for four seasons, compiling a mark of 16-16-1, and was the university's director of athletics for several years.

Persons interested in donating to the fund should make checks payable to BU Foundation/Russ Houk Scholarship Fund and send them to the Development Office, Carver Hall, BU, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. Inquiries may be directed to the office at 717-389-4663.

RETIRES — Bruce "Nick" Dietterick, director of public information, retired recently after 25 years of service to Bloomsburg University.

GENEROUS GIFT — A gift of $100,000 to Bloomsburg University has been announced by William Gittler Jr. (second from right), president of Catawissa Lumber and Specialty Company. Shown with Gittler, a 1972 graduate, are President Harry Ausprich, Jane Gittler, and Tony Ianiero, director of development.

$100,000 to enhance library

Bill and Jane Gittler, both 1972 graduates, have announced a $100,000 gift to the Bloomsburg University Foundation, according to Anthony Janiero, director of development and executive director of the Foundation.

Bill serves as president of the Catawissa Lumber and Specialty Company, Inc., and Jane is administrator of the Columbia-Montour Home Health Services and chairperson of the BU Foundation.

Janiero said the gift is for the library enhancement fund in conjunction with the $1 million fund drive initiated this year as part of the university's Sesquicentennial Celebration. "The gift is two-fold, $75,000 is being given in the name of the Catawissa Lumber and Specialty Company, Inc., and $25,000 is from Bill and Jane," he said. "It's an outstanding gift toward our fund drive goal and is greatly appreciated."

"Jane and I feel fortunate that we are in a position to make this contribution to a much needed expansion program planned for the library facilities at the university," Gittler said. "I'm personally appreciative of the fine advice and consultation I received from the late President Harvey Andrus when I entered my degree program. I've been able to put the business and management education I received at the university to good use."

Mrs. Gittler added, "We both have a warm spot in our hearts for the university and feel our gift is an investment in the human mind and that the more opportunities people have in higher education, the fewer problems society will have."

President Harry Ausprich noted the Gittlers have attended many university functions, and he has enjoyed a close association with them during the past four years. "Due to the generosity of Jane and Bill, we are much closer to meeting our library enhancement goal. We're very appreciative of their support," he said.

For the past three years, Gittler has served as president of the firm founded by his father in 1957. Following graduation from Bloomsburg High School, he attended Drexel University and then spent three years in the U.S. 5th Army Special Forces as a green beret, including a year in Vietnam, before entering BU in 1969. He is a recipient of the bronze star for meritorious service while seeing action in Vietnam. He recently attended Stanford University's seminar for executives of small businesses.

He currently serves as vice president of the board of directors of the Columbia-Montour Boy Scouts of America. He is a past president of the Bloomsburg chapter of the American Red Cross and a past member of the Bloomsburg Zoning Board.

Formerly Jane Skomsky of Berwick, Jane is a graduate of Lucy

Webb Hayes School of Nursing, Washington, D.C., as well as BU's school nursing program. She received a master's degree in nursing from College Misericordia.

She is vice president of the Bloomsburg Chamber of Commerce, a board member of BlooMed Corporation, and is a charter member of Justin, a sophomore.

The Gittlers have resided in Bloomsburg since 1969. They have two sons attending Bloomsburg High School, Derek, a junior, and

Artists Series announced

BU gives medallion to alumna, friends

An active Bloomsburg University alumnus and a retired Berwick businessman and his wife were recipients of the University Medallion during winter commencement on December 18.

Eda Bessie Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. John Lanning were given cast pewter replicas of the bronze medallion worn by the president of the university during academic convocations. It is the symbol of the leadership responsibilities vested in the university's highest office and honors those individuals whose interests and support have helped the university maintain its "margin of excellence."

Eda Bessie did extensive research in writing Profiles of the Past, A Living Legacy, a history of the university from 1839 to 1979. The work took more than five years and earned her recognition as the preeminent authority on the history of the university.

In 1982 she was awarded the Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award for her contributions to the university. She recently completed a ten-year update of Profiles as a special commemorative for the university's sesquicentennial.

"Mrs. Edwards demonstrates all the best qualities of BU alumni," President Harry Ausprich said. "Her service to her alma mater is an on-going commitment and unparalleled in the history of the university."

Eda Bessie earned her bachelor of science degree in elementary education from BU in 1941. She has held teaching positions in her hometown of Muncy, Severna Park, Md., Kane, Coatesville, Ridgway and the former Benjamin Franklin Laboratory School on campus. She is married to a BU classmate, C. Stuart Edwards, a retired dean emeritus of the university's College of Professional Studies.

BU has not been the only recipient of Eda Bessie's life of service; she has accepted leadership responsibilities in her church, community and various social and service organizations.

MR. LANNING, a self-educated person, and his wife, Helen, have always had the greatest regard for higher education. They have contributed generously to university funds to help BU achieve new standards in programs, including student scholarships, the Celebrity Artist Series and the Library Enhancement Fund.

"Through the presentation of the medallion, we are recognizing the many contributions the Lannings have made to Berwick and the local region, their civic mindedness and philanthropy, and their relationship with our university," Ausprich said.

As a young man, Mr. Lanning worked a short period for the American Car and Foundry Company in Berwick and then was employed by Clewell's Berwick Creamery, which he eventually purchased. In the early 1950s, he formed the Berwick Fabrication Company to make paper containers for dairy and food items for his creamery and other dairy companies.

In the mid-1960s, he diversified his manufacturing company with the new technology of plastics. After selling the creamery business to Dairylea in 1965, the plastic business was expanded quickly to service 13 northeastern states with five new plants. Although the business was sold to Shell Oil Company in 1966, Lanning remained president and chief executive officer until his retirement in 1974. The name of these new enterprises was changed to BERCON in 1971 and is now owned by Carlisle Capital Corporation of Boston, Mass.

According to many former employees, Mr. Lanning's motto, "price, service and quality," represents the honesty, fairness and innovativeness he has demonstrated over the years.

In addition to membership in Masonic and other fraternal organizations, Mr. Lanning's community involvement has included the Boy Scouts of America, the Berwick Hospital Board of Directors, the Berwick Chamber of Commerce, the Berwick Industrial Development Association, the United Penn Bank Advisory Board, and the Franklin First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Mrs. Lanning, the former Helen Aul, came to Berwick to work as a bookkeeper for her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Clewell, owners of Clewell's Berwick Creamery. Later, she became the executive secretary and business adviser to Mr. Lanning, serving in that capacity for 30 years. For many years she was active in the Berwick Chapter of Professional Secretaries International.

The Lannings were married in 1976. Mr. Lanning and his first wife, the late Alice Bochtel, had one daughter, Mrs. Eldred (Dewey) Zeart of Berwick. He has three grandchildren.

Previous recipients of the University Medallion have been Mrs. Louise Mitrani, her late husband Marco, and Richard Benefield.

Deaths

The sudden death of Joseph Mueller on January 8 in Fremont, California, saddened his many university and community friends. He was 63.

Mueller retired in May 1988 after 23 years of service in the math department and 33 years of service in the field of education. He started the math club and Kappa Mu Epsilon, a math honor society.

He attended St. Lawrence University and graduated from Butler University in Indianapolis. He earned a master's degree at the University of Illinois at Urbana and also did graduate work at Manhattan College, the University of Wyoming and SUNY-Binghamton.

Surviving are his wife, Elaine; a daughter, Diane Hagner; a son, Jay Mueller; a grandson; and his mother, Mrs. Clifton Tharp.

Wilbert A. Taebel, a professor of chemistry at BU from 1966 until his retirement in 1976, died January 23 at age 81.

A native of Chicago, he earned his bachelor's degree at Elmhurst College, where he was the first summa cum laude graduate in the 50-year history of the college. He received his master's degree and doctorate from the University of Illinois, where he taught for three years following graduation.

He and his wife, the former Ruth J. Schlosser, celebrated their 57th anniversary on May 21, 1988. Also surviving are his son, Wilbert J. Taebel; a daughter, Esther M. Taebel; three grandchildren; a brother and a sister.

George G. Stradman Sr., a professor of math and science at Bloomsburg for 17 years before retiring in 1973, died March 7 in Fort Myers Beach, Fla., at age 79. A 1933 graduate of Millersville University, he earned a master's degree at Temple University and completed additional graduate work there.

Surviving are his wife of 44 years, the former Beatrice Wilkie; two daughters, Mrs. Gerald (Jean) Krum and Mrs. Robert (Dorothy) Dayton; a son, George Jr.; eight grandchildren and a brother.

'Burly' Grimes Loyalty Awards

Thirty-nine Bloomsburg University alumni have earned distinction as recipients of the first annual Richard "Burly" Grimes Loyalty Awards. They earned this recognition in 1988 by attending a regional alumni chapter event, by returning to campus for either Alumni Weekend or Homecoming*, and by contributing to the Alumni Annual Fund.

The award honors "Burly" Grimes, a retired teacher from Harrisburg, who has missed only one Alumni Weekend or Homecoming since he was graduated in 1949. He currently serves on the Alumni Board of Directors.

We salute the following alumni who are recipients of the 1988 Richard "Burly" Grimes Loyalty Awards:

BU to honor physician

Dr. Thomas C. Royer, senior vice president and medical director at Geisinger Medical Center, will be the commencement speaker at the spring graduation exercises of Bloomsburg University on Saturday, May 13.

Royer also will be awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree during the ceremonies. He will be the eighth person to receive an honorary doctorate at the university. Previous recipients were Howard F. Fenstermaker, John Heinz, Frank C. Laubach, Grace M. Hopper, Roger T. Peterson, Edwin M. Barton and Louise Mitrani.

Royer has served as senior vice president at Geisinger since 1974 and medical director since 1980. He served his rotating internship at Geisinger in 1967-1968 during which he was named "outstanding intern" and was the recipient of the Montour Scientific Award.

A graduate of Bellefonte High School where he was valedictorian of the 1959 class, he was awarded his bachelor of science degree in pre-med from Penn State in 1963. His doctor of medicine degree was earned at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in 1967.

Royer has served in a number of other administrative capacities at Geisinger including director of emergency medicine residency, director of the department of emergency medicine and assistant to the medical director. He was director of the Susquehanna Poison Center from 1975 to 1987 and clinical associate professor at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center from 1975 to 1988. He initiated and formalized plans for Geisinger's Life Flight Program and began the Susquehanna Poison Center.

From 1972 to 1974, he served in the U.S. Navy as chief of surgery at the Beaufort Naval Hospital. In 1973, he received his certification from the American Board of Surgery.

In addition to membership in local, state and national medical associations and societies, he is a member of the Society for Physicians in Administration, American College of Physician Executives, American College of Emergency Physicians and the Susquehanna Trauma Society.

Royer is president of the board of directors of the Danville Area School District and is a member of the Danville Recreation Center. He is a past president of the Community Singers and a past board member of the Danville Area United Fund. In 1985, he received the first annual Lewis Hine Award for Service to Children and Youth, presented by the National Child Labor Committee of New York City. In 1981, he was named "Citizen of the Year" by the American Legion.

Royer and his wife, Jane, are the parents of five children: Jane, Chris, Gwyneth, Heather and Brent. The family resides in Danville.

Report from Dean Baird

Bloomsburg University is especially proud of its general education program. You may read a lot in the popular media about how authors like Allan Bloom have assailed higher education and its lack of standards and commitment to traditional subject areas of academia. Bloomsburg University requires every student who graduates to have over 50 of their 128 hours from the three broad areas of liberal studies: arts/humanities, social sciences, natural sciences/mathematics. In addition, we have a two-course writing requirement, a quantitative requirement, a values-ethics-decision making requirement, a communications requirement, and a physical fitness requirement. Collectively, these aspects of the curriculum are referred to as general education.

BAIRD

Despite our relative good standing in terms of general education, the University is not content with keeping those requirements unchanged or immutable. At the present time, for example, we have faculty committees considering our science requirement, a cultural diversity addition, and our writing requirements. We are seriously considering writing across-the-curriculum as an addition to our general education theme. Faculty members are also concerned about computer literacy and the importance of foreign languages for our future students. As such, we are in the business of projecting society's needs for the 21st century, a mere 11 years away.

I tell you these things because the general education program is a responsibility of the College of Arts and Sciences. Our faculty are proud of their dedication, not only to the majors they represent, but also to students in professional studies and business, who are required to take those same general education courses in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Two additional parts of our curriculum I would like to mention at this time. One is our devotion to internships and practicum programs. We have active internships in the departments of history, economics, psychology, sociology/social welfare, mass communications, and biology. These opportunities allow students to gain practical experience, job-site recommendations, and academic credit that is germane to their future. Faculty members provide both classroom preparation and site visitations. Professor Chuck Lauderbach of our Sociology/Social Welfare department is the internship coordinator.

The second aspect is our Honors Program, which allows third and fourth year students to pursue independent study in the area of their choice. Selected students, who have achieved honors standing after two years, are encouraged to secure a faculty mentor and pursue independent study and research after a semester of honors seminar. Not only does this afford students the opportunity to explore their own ideas within their major, but it also gives faculty members the chance to work intimately with excellent students on projects to which they are committed.

In my next column, I will discuss the importance of research to our faculty at Bloomsburg University, and several of the fine accomplishments we have recently recorded within Arts and Sciences.

Representing BU were Husky Ambassadors David Kowalski '89 and Lisa Markel '91, and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Backyard Chapter

Noted undersea explorer Robert Ballard fascinated a large audience during an illustrated lecture in Mitrani Hall on March 28. A geophysicist, Ballard discovered the site of the Titanic's wreck in 1985 and returned in 1986 to photograph the sunken luxury liner which lies two and a half miles beneath the ocean surface.

His discovery prompted him to author the book, Exploring the Titanic, and later a second book specifically for children ages eight to 14 that includes historical photographs and illustrations.

A senior scientist in the Ocean Engineering Department at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and head of the Deep Submergence Laboratory, Ballard has led or participated in many deep sea expeditions using submersibles.

Prior to the lecture, Ballard had dinner with a group which included the following alumni and their guests: Charline Yeager '64, Clare C. Fleck '76, Ray McBride '39, Edna McBride '40, Jane Anne James '59 and David Guzofsky '72. Also attending were Husky Ambassadors Jenette Delmonico and Marie James.

Ball is a great success

One hundred sixty-eight faculty, staff, alumni and friends joined President and Mrs. Harry Ausprich for the annual President's Ball at the Willow Run Inn, Berwick. The event raised nearly $5,500 for university scholarships.

Fort Lauderdale Chapter

Attending an alumni reception in Fort Lauderdale on March 10 were Donald A. Watts '37, Gladys Watts, Stu Marvin '78, Diane Marvin '79, Stephen Packer '77, Maryrose Guerrieri-Nesbitt '77, Doug Nesbitt, John Kuntz '49, Elaine Kuntz, Shelley Ruch '83, Frank Minishak '84, Janice Collins Lorah '61, Jim Lorah, Regina Truman '83, William Lank, President Harry Ausprich, and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Boca Raton Chapter

Attending the 10th annual alumni luncheon in Boca Raton on March 11 were Francis (Red) Garrity '28, Isabel Chelosky Hester '29, Tony and May Pequita, Dorothy Janowski '42, Joseph Curilla '50, Molly Curilla, George Casari '38, Agnes Casari '41, James H. Off to a great Ballet superstar Rudolph Nureyev launched the sesquicentennial celebration with a performance on January 13 in Mitrani Hall. The event attracted approximately 1,700 people, including James H. McCormick, chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, and Sondra Myers, cultural advisor to Gov. Casey.

The sesquicentennial year was actually signalled at noon on January 1 when students, alumni, faculty, staff, administrators, trustees and foundation board members gathered in the tower of Carver Hall to ring the bell 150 times.

Prior to the start of the Nureyev event, President Harry Ausprich welcomed the audience and introduced McCormick and Myers. Also making brief remarks was John L. Walker, vice president for institutional advancement, who is serving as chairperson of the Sesquicentennial Committee.

The text of Ms. Myers' remarks:

It is my privilege to bring to this singular event at Bloomsburg the greetings of our governor, the Honorable Robert P. Casey. Governor Casey had hoped to be here this evening. Who would not? To his regret he was obliged instead to take care of other important matters of state; and so he has asked me to bring you his best wishes and reflect briefly on this marvelous occasion.

Rudolf Nureyev made his leap to freedom in 1961, and when he did he not only changed his life — he changed ours. He leapt into our living rooms; he danced into our hearts.

He opened the eyes and the minds of the American public to the glories of ballet — to the wondrous pleasures that the sight of the human body in motion can bring to those of us in our seats.

Our country — throughout its history — has been enriched, renewed and occasionally enthralled by its newcomers. In the case of Rudolf Nureyev, it has been all of the above. A new star entered our galaxy with his arrival in the free world, and life will always be brighter because of it.

Rudolf Nureyev shows us, in his breathtaking way, what art is all about; it is about taking the breath away; about wonder and magic and surprise; it is about lifting our minds and spirits, sparking our imaginations, challenging us to see old things in new ways.

Art prompts us to leap higher in our own pursuits, because it demonstrates the enormity of our human potential.

Nureyev at Bloomsburg is a landmark event at this state university — a noble tribute to its Sesquicentennial celebration; we hope, too, that it will be a landmark event for Rudolf Nureyev. I know how carefully and lovingly Bloomsburg chose the event that would properly launch this important anniversary.

We in the Casey administration believe that the students and faculty of this university and the citizens of the Bloomsburg community deserve nothing less than an evening with Rudolf Nureyev. And Governor Casey has asked me to convey that message to you; and to congratulate President Harry Ausprich, Dean of Student Development Jack Mulka, and the many others from the university and the community who have made this remarkable visit possible.

We in the Casey administration believe that the students and faculty of this university and the citizens of the Bloomsburg community deserve nothing less than an evening with Rudolf Nureyev. And Governor Casey has asked me to convey that message to you; and to congratulate President Harry Ausprich, Dean of Student Development Jack Mulka, and the many others from the university and the community who have made this remarkable visit possible.

Bloomsburg University stands as a beacon among academic institutions in the Commonwealth in its recognition of the centrality of the arts to education — and to the health and well-being of our society. Its commitment to serving its students — to opening their minds and unleashing their creative energies — has continued through the years to serve the Commonwealth nobly.

Governor Casey sends his congratulations on the achievement of the past and his best wishes for the promise of the future.

But the longer I speak, the further I will postpone the unique pleasures in store for you. This is not a night for words, it is a night for Nureyev.

The text of Chancellor McCormick's remarks:

On behalf of the Board of Governors for the State System of Higher Education, Bloomsburg's 13 sister universities, our 92,000 System students, and 10,000 men and women to teach, guide, and

A NIGHT TO REMEMBER — Jane and Bill Gittler Jr., both 1972 graduates, were among the 1,700 alumni and friends of Bloomsburg University who enjoyed the performance of Rudolph Nureyev on January 13, the kickoff of the year-long Sesquicentennial Celebration. They are shown at a reception at the Magee Center after the performance.

SESQUI PROFITS — John L. Walker, right, vice president for institutional advancement and chairperson of the Sesquicentennial Committee, accepts a check from Bill Bailey, manager of the University Store, representing partial profits from the sale of Sesquicentennial items. The money will be used by the committee to fund some aspect of the celebration.

care for our universities, I bring Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania greetings and congratulations. I am pleased to be with you on this, the formal occasion launching the 150th anniversary of the founding of Bloomsburg University.

The Bloomsburg story has been one demonstrated by the determination to rise above the ordinary. Men and women have worked together since 1839 to meet the needs of their special student clientele and their region. They have been, then and now, an ever-present, ever-caring, ever-responsive force of humankind, all carrying the banner of service, whether academic, social or cultural in nature. That banner has flown for a century and a half. It will continue to fly.

These university events may well be the epitome of cultural opportunity in this great part of our state. It is fitting that 150 years of a quality presence are marked by so distinctive a schedule.

There is no doubt that President Ausprich has brought a new level of artistic endeavor to Bloomsburg, along with his other talents as an academic leader. He is a doer. I thank him for what he, through Bloomsburg, has given to the entire State System of Higher Education. What a significant, special time to be part of Bloomsburg University.

With this celebration, Bloomsburg symbolically pays respect to the past and takes a unique opportunity to touch the future. Now is the time for planning and for vision. These coming months will be the time for renewing the promise of the university's mission and for keeping the great legacy of learning that is Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania.

On a personal note, I confess great pride in having been part of the Bloomsburg University community for 10 years. As president, and now as chancellor, the tie remains. My family and I now claim a wonderful 15-year relationship with Bloomsburg — one tenth of this university's life has been our life. I am and will continue to be grateful for the opportunity of service. Again, congratulations to the university, to our community, and to Pennsylvania. The mission of the State System of Higher Education thrives here.

SIGNALING A CELEBRATION — Members of the Bloomsburg University family gathered in the tower of Carver Hall on New Year's Day to toll the bell 150 times — once for each year of the school's existence. From left are Frank Hunsinger, BU equipment operator, Jane Gittler '72, chairperson of the Bloomsburg University Foundation; Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the BU Alumni Association; Howard Fenstermaker '12, faculty emeritus and former president of the BU Alumni Association; President Harry Ausprich; John Walker, president of the senior class; Beverly Oberrender, representing parents; Brian Johnson, president of the faculty; and John Dorin, chairperson of the BU Council of Trustees.

ALUMNI BELLRINGERS — George and Vera Derk '55 and '60 of Wyomissing were in Bloomsburg on January 1, visiting Vera's cousin, Robert J. Bucher '76, his wife, Vickie, and their son, Brian. When they read an article in the newspaper about plans to ring Carver's bell 150 times to signal the start of the Sesquicentennial Celebration, they decided to join the festivities.

TITANTIC EXPLORER AT BU — Robert Battard, noted geophysicist and underwater explorer who located the wreck of the Titanic, attracted a large audience for his appearance as part of the Provost's Lecture Series in March. During a dinner with alumni and faculty, he cordially signed autographs for admirers, including Jennette Delmonico, a Husky Ambassador.

CARL SHIVELY '58 was featured in a recent article in the Sunbury Daily Item, written by Gail Rippey:

Carl Shively's wine-making experiments while he was a graduate student at Bucknell University not only led him to a career as a microbiologist and a professor of biology, but it also prompted him to become an award-winning amateur wine producer.

A Sunbury native, Shively is the son of Vera Stark, a resident of the River Front Apartments.

Shively has been on sabbatical this past semester from Alfred University, where he has been on the faculty for 20 years. He is working in the laboratory of Taylor Wine Co., trying to find a relationship between nitrogen levels and the occurrence of a haze which sometimes appears in dessert wines long after bottling.

In addition, he is experimenting in Taylor's Developmental Winery with different types of wine to come up with a new variety. He's also conducting a broad range of biochemical tests on both the grapes and wine.

"I'm very much interested in wine chemistry," Shively explained. "My Ph.D. is in microbiology, and part of microbiology deals with fermentation."

Not only will the work he does at Taylor help the winery, it will also benefit his own wine-making ventures.

Shively, who has earned national status among winemakers for his award-winning wines, has been making his own batches of the drink for the past 25 years.

At the amateur wine competition conducted during the New York State Fair, held August 26 to September 5 in Syracuse, Shively's 1986 pinot noir chardonnay blend champagne earned a gold medal as did his 1986 chardonnay.

The chardonnay also earned him best of show in a national American Wine Society competition in Stamford, Conn.

He also won the Dr. Konstantine Frank Award at the fair for his use of Vinefera grapes. Frank was the first person to start a vineyard of the European variety of grapes in eastern United States.

In addition to gold medals, Shively has earned silver and bronze medals at the NYS fair for his champagnes and red dinner wines.

His Rabat, a dessert wine, won him a silver medal in the 1986 American Wine Society competition, while his champagne, produced from a blend of chardonnay and pinot noir, won the gold medal and best of show.

Although he has a press and a crusher in the wine cellar of his home that enable him to make his own wines, he does not grow the grapes.

"Our weather is very much like that in Buffalo," he said. Despite living only 35 minutes from the Finger Lakes region — an area renowned for its grapes — "the weather is much milder there."

Before coming to Alfred, Shively taught at Cortland State in New York. His first job in education was teaching history at Sunbury High School, his alma mater. A 1952 graduate, Shively earned his bachelor's degree in biology and education at Bloomsburg State College, and then went on for his master's degree in biology at Bucknell University.

It was during his years at the Lewisburg college that he developed a love for wine.

"My advisor and I experimented with wine making," Shively explained. "I became more and more involved as time progressed."

From Bucknell, Shively continued his education, earning a doctorate in microbiology from St. Bonaventure University in Olean, N.Y.

Shively, his wife, the former Sylvia Brosious of Sunbury, and their children came to Alfred in 1968, where being close to the wine district cemented his interest in wine making.

Shively said there's really no secret to his wine-making prowess. He contends that if one adheres to basic wine-making principles and keeps containers full to avoid spoilage, he or she won't run into problems.

It is a known fact, he added, that a good winemaker can produce a high quality wine when the grape quality is high. "The challenge is to produce a respectable wine in years when grape quality is poor."

Shively is so highly regarded for his knowledge of wines that he serves as national co-chairman of the American Wine Society's wine-judging training program, a position which takes him around the nation judging commercial and amateur wines at competitions.

In addition, articles in the American Wine Society Journal have brought him recognition. He is a member of the American Society of Enology and Viticulture, a scientific organization, the American Society for Microbiology, and Sigma Xi, the national honorary scientific society.

In his first editorial in the September/October issue, he notes: "My military service included four years with the U.S. Air Force and another four with the U.S. Army, working in the military intelligence field both times. I was trained as both an Arabic and Russian linguist. (I graduated from the Defense Language Institute in 1977 and again in 1985.)

"Serious wargaming began for me in 1963, when I received Parker Brothers' 1863 game for my birthday. My first article, a strategy piece for that same game, appeared in the International Federation of Wargaming's Journal in 1969. Since then I've been published in Campaign, Europe '44, Moves, The Grenadier, Fire & Movement, The Wargamer, and various hobby newsletters. I have designed four published wargames: Westwall, End of the Iron Dream, Dynamo and Tigers (all from 3W).

"My favorite gaming eras are, in order, World War II, the American Civil War and the Napoleonic era. I favor the strategic over the operational, and the operational over the tactical. All-time favorite games include (in no particular order): Stalingrad III, Kaiserschlacht, Battles for the Ardennes Quadrigame, Battle for Stalingrad, Crisis in the Ukraine, and A House Divided."

Passing on the legacy

As we celebrate our "Legacy of Learning" as members of the Bloomsburg University family, we are undertaking an exciting project to commemorate 150 years of leadership in education and to demonstrate our hope for the future.

In addition to the educational benefits we gained as students at Bloomsburg, we have also enjoyed another legacy — a beautiful, well-kept campus that has attracted generations of students looking for a college or university.

To enhance that legacy for future generations, we will plant 150 trees on campus during the fall celebration of the Sesquicentennial. In addition, it is our goal to plant 150 trees beyond the campus — in every county of Pennsylvania, in every state of the Union, and in every country in which Bloomsburg alumni live. This symbolic gesture will coincide with a symposium on environmental issues which will attract speakers with national reputations.

If you would like to sponsor a tree, either on campus or in the area in which you live, please send for a packet of detailed information by returning the coupon below.

YEARBOOK DILEMMA: For some inexplicable reason, not everyone in the Class of 1985 received a yearbook. Nor are there any yearbooks left over. We're trying to provide a happy ending for those class members who didn't get their yearbooks. If you received a 1985 yearbook by mistake, or if you received two copies, please contact the Alumni Office. Or if you are a two-yearbook family, would you consider donating one of them to a classmate who doesn't have one? Thanks.

Say cheese!

For many alumni, Bloomsburg has been a family affair. They are proud to note that parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts and cousins have all shared the Bloomsburg experience.

Well, now is the time to show off your BU family. When the family converges this spring and summer for commencements, weddings and reunions, get all your BU alumni together for a photo. And pull in the relatives by marriage, too!

For best results, take the photo outdoors and use 35mm film. Color or black and white photos are acceptable. Be sure to identify every one in the photo with complete name and graduation year.

Prizes will be awarded to the largest families, as well as other categories. All photos will be published in a special Sesquicentennial issue of The Alumni Quarterly this fall.

Please send your photo to the Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. Deadline for photos is September 15, 1989.

Edwin M. Barton '07, well-known educator, writer and historian, died April 9 at age 99. He was recipient of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce "Citizen of the Year" award in 1970, the BU Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award in 1975, and an honorary doctorate from the university in 1985. He was listed in the 1951 edition of "Who's Who in Education."

He was the author of Columbia County, A History (1984), Columbia County Two Hundred Years Ago (1976), and several articles which appeared in historical pamphlets. He was past president, executive secretary emeritus and official historian of the Columbia County Historical Society.

A native of Mt. Carmel, he was a son of the late J. Sanderson and Matilda Barton Lazarus. His name was legally changed in 1919. He spent most of his life in Bloomsburg, where he attended the training school at Bloomsburg State Normal School.

After graduating from Bloomsburg in 1907, he earned bachelor's and master's degrees at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut. He also earned a second master's degree at Columbia University, with a special diploma, "Supervisor of History Instruction." He also took additional courses at the University of Minnesota.

His first year of teaching was at the Locust Township High School, and his second year was at the Millville High School. He then taught in New York City and in Meriden, Connecticut, before joining the faculty of a private school in Minnesota. From there he went to the faculty of the Minneapolis Central School. His longest tenure — 20 years — was as supervising head of social studies in the city school system of Elizabeth, N.J.

After retiring to Bloomsburg, he taught both full-time and part-time at what was then Bloomsburg State Teachers College. From 1956 to 1973 he was proprietor of a modest business, the Barton Duplicating Service.

He was extremely active in the Bloomsburg community, serving on the school board, the Chamber of Commerce (as director and treasurer), the parking and traffic commission, and the parking authority. He was founder and first president of the Columbia-Montour Torch Club; he initiated and was former head of the Columbia County Tourist Promotion Agency. He was a member of the Bloomsburg Kiwanis Club, with repeated service on the board of directors, and served the Boy Scouts in both Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

His wife, the former Anna M. Paddock, died in 1973. Surviving are a son, Edwin Sanderson Barton; a daughter, Mary Barton Sharkey; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Merle Goodenough Patten '13 of Honesdale died February 26. She formerly taught at Cold Springs-Rileyville, Calkins and at the Honesdale Catholic High School.

Surviving are her husband, Fred Patten; two daughters, Mrs. Arloe (Alice) Gager and Ruth Schweighofer; six grandchildren, several great-grandchildren, a brother, nieces and nephews.

Attention, Betsy Ross!

Now you, too, can make your mark on history! As part of the Sesquicentennial Celebration, the Alumni Board of Directors is sponsoring a contest to design a flag for the Alumni Association.

You don't have to make the flag, just send us the prize-winning design! We will take care of arrangements to have the flag made in time for Homecoming Weekend in October.

The winning flag will be carried in the Homecoming Parade and will be flown proudly under the American flag at the Fenstemaker Alumni House.

The winning designer will receive a commemorative plaque and a $100 gift certificate from the University Store.

Send your design to the Fenstemaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. Deadline for designs is August 1, 1989.

Report from Dean Howard Macauley

As some wag put it, "Time flies when you're having fun." Notwithstanding our share of problems and occasional hard times, the faculty and staff of the College of Professional Studies have had, are having, and expect to continue to have fun. We take that view particularly as we enter the university's sesquicentennial year with its theme, "A Legacy of Learning." We acknowledge our debt to you as alumni and accept our responsibility to those men and women who will join your ranks, but we also believe that learning can be fun.

In that spirit and with the risk of missing some of the highlights of the past, present and future, permit me to ramble across time to refresh your memory and to inform you of future prospects.

MACAULEY

THE PAST. With the establishment of the State System of Higher Education in 1983, the School of Professional Studies became the College of Professional Studies, a School of Education and a School of Health Science were established within Professional Studies, and the six departments were reorganized into three — the Department of Curriculum and Foundations; the Department of Communication Disorders and Special Education; and the Department of Nursing.

Two years ago the college became a charter member of the nationwide USA/China Teacher Education Consortium and entered into agreements with Shenyang Teachers' College, Qinghai Normal University, and Northwest Teachers' College, calling for the exchange of students, faculty and curriculum materials. The first such exchange with these institutions in the People's Republic of China consisted of a shipment of textbooks from our Curriculum Materials Center.

The nursing faculty also entered the sphere of international education last year when Jean Kalat offered a course in England on nursing trends and issues in that country.

In keeping with the renewed interest in teacher education, the School of Education initiated a series of curricular and policy changes, many of which predated the reforms at the state and national levels. Among the major modifications were setting the grade point average for admission, retention and graduation at 2.5; requiring a sequence of supervised field experiences; and requiring successful completion (grade of C or better) of two English composition courses, of a public speaking and/or an interpersonal communication course, and of all courses in the major.

When the Pennsylvania Academy for the Profession of Teaching, an initiative of the State System of Higher Education, launched its Urban Education Project, Dr. John Hranitz and Dr. David Washburn were selected as Academy Fellows in Urban Education.

As part of its effort to integrate technology with practice, the Department of Nursing applied $35,000 from a Helene Fuld Trust grant to purchase a bedside computer system for the Nursing Simulated Learning Laboratory.

THE PRESENT. Two technology initiatives in the communication disorders and special education areas are proving to be very successful and hold considerable promise for the future. An interactive videodisc approach designed by Dr. Samuel Slike and Joanne Jackowski to teach sign language is being used as a supplement to regular classroom instruction and has led to a new project in which videodisc technology will be used to instruct students in producing sentences in both Pidgin and American Sign Language.

The second initiative, Technology for Exceptionalities, is a new course conceived by Dr. Mary Hill. It covers basic computer applications on campus but goes beyond theory and drill by placing the students in the Bloomshurg Area School District where they can apply their skills as part of a supervised, goal-oriented experience.

In the area of reading, two notable programs, through the leadership of Dr. Ed Poostay, continue a rich tradition of service to the community and to the profession. This year the Annual Reading Conference will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary, a significant milestone in our "Legacy of Learning." In addition, the Mom and Pop Reading Program, a parent involvement, parent-training program designed to show how parents can improve their children's basic reading skills and help with homework, has received the endorsement of the Pennsylvania Department of Education and has been adopted in over 40 school districts in the Commonwealth.

The Master of Science in Nursing program, which has grown in enrollment by 50 percent in the last two years, will be reviewed this year for initial accreditation by the National League for Nursing.

At the same time, enrollments in the undergraduate nursing and teacher education programs continue to grow at significant rates.

In addition to the two fellows who continue to participate in the Pennsylvania Academy, Dr. Nancy Gilgannon has been selected as a fellow in program evaluation. The School of Education has also received a grant of $10,000 from the Academy to work in partnership with the Hazleton and Wilkes-Barre school districts on a project to integrate multicultural understanding and experiences into both basic and higher education.

The college accepted its first exchange faculty member from China this fall. Mr. Jin, a physics professor in Shenyang Teachers' College, is enrolled in the instructional technology program.

THE FUTURE. This summer the nursing faculty have scheduled two courses in England. Nursing trends and issues will be offered again, and Dr. Gavaghan will teach a graduate course in advanced nursing practice.

In the fall, two more exchange faculty members from Shenyang Teachers' College will be enrolled at BU.

The State Board of Nursing will review the BSN program in the fall, while all teacher education programs will be reviewed for approval by the Pennsylvania Department of Education and for accreditation by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education in 1990.

BU hosts Governor's School for Arts

Bloomsburg University signed an agreement on April 13 to host the Governor's School for the Arts this summer. BU joins Penn State, the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, the University of Pittsburgh, and Carnegie Mellon University as a host institution for one of the five Governor's Schools.

"We're delighted that a State System university, particularly Bloomsburg with its recent emphasis on culture and the arts, has been given the opportunity to host one of the Governor's Schools," said James H. McCormick, chancellor of the State System.

The contract is between the Pennsylvania Governor's School for the Arts, sponsored by the Central Susquehanna Intermediate Unit 16, and the university.

"We see this as a great opportunity to provide a service to the Commonwealth and to further enhance the emphasis on culture and the arts at our university," said Harry Ausprich, Bloomsburg's president.

Winter sports post .762 winning record

The men's and women's basketball teams set school records for most victories in a season, the wrestling team claimed its 11th Pennsylvania Conference title, and the women's swimming and diving squad posted its 13th-consecutive winning season to highlight a fine winter athletic season at Bloomsburg University. Those four teams, along with the men's swimming and diving squad, combined to post an overall mark of 79-22 for a winning percentage of .782.

Coach Charlie Chronister's (18 seasons, 327-163) men's basketball team registered a 27-5 record, including a 10-2 mark in the Eastern Division, to capture a divisional co-championship. The 27 victories broke the existing school record for wins in a season (24) established by the 1981-1982. The squad also finished second in the PC and the NCAA Eastern Regional. Junior Bill Connelly led a balanced offensive attack averaging 16.8 points per game and was joined in double figures by sophomore Craig Phillips, who averaged 13.3 p.p.g. Senior Alex Nelcha led the squad in rebounds with 7.3 per game, and junior Dave Carpenter added 6.8 per game. For their efforts, Connelly, Phillips and Nelcha were named to the All-PC team, while Connelly and Phillips were also second team picks for the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC).

The women's basketball unit went 28-2 while winning the NCAA Eastern Regional Championship in the team's first-ever appearance in the national tournament. Coach Joe Bressi's (four seasons, 68-14) club set a new school record for wins in a season (28) by surpassing the existing record of 21 set last season. Senior Theresa Lorenzi finished her career with 2,173 points which ranks her tied for second in PC career scoring. She scored 550 points this year and averaged 20.4 points per game. Sophomore Becky Pigga also rewrote the record book by setting the PC season assists record with 215. Sophomore Barb Hall led the Huskies in rebounding with 9.8 per game, followed by Lorenzi with 7.5 per game. Lorenzi, Hall, and Pigga were selected to the All-PC first team, Lorenzi was named to the ECAC first team, and Hall received ECAC second team honors. In addition, Lorenzi was named ECAC "Player of the Year."

The wrestling team won its 11th PC championship and finished fifth in the Eastern Wrestling League (EWL) as it posted a 13-7 record. Coach Roger Sander's (22 seasons, 250-102-5) team sent five wrestlers to the NCAA Division I championships and had one finish All-American to propel the team to a 31st-place finish. Seniors Dave Morgan (35-5-2) and Marty King (21-12-1), along with junior Dave Kennedy (25-9-1), won titles for the Huskies in the PC event, while Morgan captured the squad's lone EWL title. All three wrestlers, plus junior Tony Reed (29-10-2) and sophomore Paul Keysaw (14-6-1), earned invitations to the national championships. Morgan became a two-time All-American and tied the school's all-time career win mark of 127 victories by finishing sixth at 150 pounds.

The women's swimming and diving squad turned in a winning season for the 13th year in a row, posting a record of 7-4 in dual-meet competition. Third-year head coach Dave Rider's (21-11, women; 10-17, men) Huskies finished second in the PC championships for the ninth consecutive year boosted by several fine individual performances.

Freshman Tracy Price captured three crowns including the 100 and 200-yard butterfly and 400-yard individual medley. The first-year performer was the top individual point scorer in the PC meet. She went on to finish ninth in the 200-yard butterfly at the NCAA Division II meet to gain All-American honors. Teammates Kim Yount and Deb Legg also won PC titles with Yount finishing first in the 100-yard backstroke and Legg winning the 1,650-yard freestyle. Yount placed 11th in the backstroke race at the national championships and, along with Price, Legg, and Heidi Kohlhaas, formed the 12th-place 200-yard medley relay team as all four swimmers earned All-American honors.

Men's swimming and diving improved its finish in the conference meet over the past few seasons by placing sixth after compiling a 4-4 record during the season. Newcomer John Stuhliager was the top individual performer for the Huskies in the PC meet as he registered a fifth place finish in the 50-yard freestyle and a sixth place showing in the 100-yard butterfly. The Huskies' 200-yard medley relay team of Brian Duda, Jack Carr, Mark Moore, and Todd McAllister also finished fifth in the PC championships.

leaders. We have discussed the effects of the new legislation and have developed acceptable alternatives to the old ways of doing business which, in many instances, were law-breaking violations.

We have made significant progress in the past year as a result of these efforts on campus. Unfortunately, we have had to take disciplinary action against a few groups who were unwilling to accept a new stance by the university and the Greek system. We are proud of the change in attitude since then, and the resulting accomplishments of our student leaders have been tremendous. If you get a chance, you can help too by giving them positive feedback for their efforts. They need your support and maturity so they realize that they are on the right track. The old days are behind us.

Together we can build on our already solid foundation so as to avoid tragedies or the ultimate of having the abolishment of our Greek system considered. We appreciate any assistance you can provide by setting good examples and being good role models.

As a university community, we pride ourselves by caring for the welfare of others. We share these thoughts with you and hope you will express your ideas and suggestions. If we can help, or if you would like more information, please don't hesitate to write or call me at 717-389-4065.

BU Expedition to Alaska

Negotiating a rapid on the Hulahula River in the heart of the Alaskan Brooks Range. The Hulahula is fed by the melting of glaciers and snowfields 5,000 feet above the river. Capsizing is unthinkable!

President Ausprich leads planning effort

One of the most important items on the university's agenda this fall is the development of a series of strategic direction statements that will help to chart our course during the next decade. These statements, when finally adopted, will help us to communicate both within and outside the university community a stronger sense of institutional direction. The Middle States Evaluation Team during its recent visit mentioned the fact that there did not seem to be a commonly shared view of the future. In response to that concern, in early May, I presented a proposal to the Planning/Budget Committee for developing strategic direction statements for the university. That plan was subsequently endorsed by the Planning/Budget Committee, the senior management staff, and the university's Council of Trustees.

AUSPRICH

In developing the draft strategic direction statements, I used three basic approaches. First, I conducted a series of discussions with various campus constituencies to solicit ideas and issues that should be addressed in the document. Mary Anne Klemkosky, Alumni Association President, played a very active role in these discussions. Second, I carefully reviewed previous planning documents, the Middle States Self-Study Report, the State System and university mission statements, and a variety of other documents. Finally, I considered my values and visions of higher education and gave special attention to issues currently before the higher education community. These three steps helped me to develop a perspective from the people within the university community, establish a historical context from previous planning efforts, and relate the process to current thought in higher education.

On July 18, 1989 my draft strategic direction statements were distributed to the university community in a special issue of our campus newsletter, The Communique. During the period from July 18 through October 1, 1989, the draft statements will be discussed and debated broadly. The Alumni Board will be active participants in the discussions that will lead to the adoption of a final series of strategic direction statements on October 1, 1989.

Twice in recent history the university has undertaken similar efforts. In 1974, a concept document for the remainder of the decade of the '70s was developed by the Bloomsburg University Presidential Planning Commission. Again in 1980 a concept document prepared by the Planning Commission charted the university's course for the period from 1980 to 1989. It is difficult to overstate the importance of the work which we have now undertaken as we give direction to the university for the remainder of this century.

The process of developing the draft strategic direction statements has been both challenging and invigorating. Bloomsburg University is indeed endowed with many dedicated and committed alumni, faculty, staff, and students who care deeply about the future of our university and have been very willing to participate in this important process.

If you would like a copy of the draft strategic direction statements or have comments, suggestions, or ideas, I urge you to contact Mary Anne Klemkosky, President of the Alumni Association, or one of the members of the Alumni Association Board of Directors.

BU mourns dear friend

Bloomsburg University benefactor Louise Mitrani died July 16 at her home following a prolonged illness.

Over the years, Mrs. Mitrani and her late husband, Marco, donated hundreds of thousands of dollars to Bloomsburg University. In appreciation, the university presented her with an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters at its August 1988 commencement.

The Mitrani's helped establish a $500,000 academic scholarship program for gifted students in 1985, and when Marco Mitrani, founder of Milco Industries, died in October 1987, another $500,000 was given to the scholarship fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitrani also helped with the renovation of the Francis B. Haas Center for the Performing Arts, and in 1985 the 2,000-seat main auditorium in that facility was named the Marco and Louise Mitrani Hall.

The Mitrani's also established a fund to support arts and cultural programs such as the Celebrity Artist Series at the university.

In 1983, Mr. and Mrs. Mitrani were the recipients of the Bloomsburg University Medallion, the institution's highest award for outstanding community service.

Mrs. Mitrani was active in civic and philanthropic affairs, and she gave substantial support to the Girl Scouts of America, of which she was a member for more than 25 years. The Penn's Woods Girl Scout Council named its camp — Camp Louise — in her honor.

She was also a charter member of the Family Counseling and Mental Health Association, and she and her husband contributed to the United Jewish Appeal, the Bloomsburg Hospital, schools and a library in Israel, and the Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble.

Mrs. Mitrani was a member of Beth Israel Synagogue of Bloomsburg.

A native of Bulgaria, she was the daughter of the late Joseph and Anna Alimlech Bakish. Mrs. Mitrani came to the United States as an infant and had resided in Bloomsburg for the past 52 years following her marriage. She lived at 828 East Third Street.

She is survived by a son, Victor, of Florida, two grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, a niece and a nephew.

Montgomery County, alumni honored

BU's new $5.5 million Montgomery Apartment Complex will be dedicated on Sunday, October 22, as part of the community weekend celebration of the sesquicentennial. Located on the university's upper campus, known as Mt. Olympus, the complex includes six buildings with 16 efficiency apartments in each.

The Council of Trustees named the complex in honor of Montgomery County, which currently is home to over 400 BU students and over 1,600 alumni. Six other counties have been similarly honored: Columbia, Montour, Luzerne, Lycoming, Northumberland and Schuylkill.

The individual buildings have been named to honor six outstanding alumni who distinguished themselves by their professional accomplishments and their service to others. These individuals, who studied at Bloomsburg in the late 19th century and early 20th century, are Charles H. Albert, Class of 1879; Edwin M. Barton, Class of 1907; Fred W. Diehl, Class of 1909; Nevlin T. Englehart, Class of 1905; Susie Rayos Marmon, Class of 1906; and Annlee E. Taylor Marshall, Class of 1901.

Charles H. Albert. Prior to joining the Bloomsburg faculty in 1887, Professor Albert had served as a teacher in Snyder and Union Counties, had been principal of the Catawissa schools when the first high school building was opened in 1881, and had been superintendent of schools in Waynesboro.

He served Bloomsburg until his retirement in 1926. The dedication to him in the 1928 Obiter notes: "This record has given him a continuous service in the school of 39 years, and as a student or teacher of 45 years. He was a member of that small group of men, who laid the foundation for the success of the school, and who through its earlier and later years gave the institution the exceptional reputation, which it has always enjoyed in educational circles. . . ."

"He has been active in the religious and civic life of Bloomsburg and always ready to work for any worthy cause. . . . Professor Albert was always a sincere friend to the students and ever ready to help us."

Professor Albert's son, R. Bruce Albert, Class of 1906, served as president of the Alumni Association.

Edwin M. Barton. A well-known educator, writer and historian, Mr. Barton was recipient of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce's "Citizen of the Year" award in 1970, the BU Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award in 1975, and an honorary doctorate from the university in 1985. He was listed in the 1951 edition of Who's Who in Education.

He was the author of Columbia County, A History (1984),

Columbia County Two Hundred Years Ago (1976), and several articles which appeared in historical pamphlets. He was past president, executive secretary emeritus and official historian of the Columbia County Historical Society.

After retiring from a teaching career in Elizabeth, N.J., he taught both full-time and part-time at BSTC.

He was extremely active in the Bloomsburg community, serving on the school board, the Chamber of Commerce, the parking and traffic commission and the parking authority. He was founder and first president of the Columbia-Montour Torch Club, and he initiated and headed the Columbia County Tourist Promotion Agency.

Fred W. Diehl. Mr. Diehl, a teacher and school administrator in Montour County for 46 years, had the distinction over the years of serving as president and vice president of Bloomsburg's Board of Trustees and the Alumni Association. He was a trustee for 28 years and served on the Alumni Board of Directors for many years, serving as president of the latter from 1926 to 1929 and from 1961 to 1962.

In 1962, the Alumni Association honored him with its Distinguished Service Award in recognition of his long and distinguished record of service in education, in his church and his community.

In recognition of his dedicated leadership and service, the citizens of Danville named a new school in his honor.

Nevlin T. Englehart. Mr. Englehart, who started working as a bookkeeper at the Normal School six weeks after he graduated in 1905, went on to serve as superintendent of buildings and grounds for 33 years prior to retirement in 1951. His 45-year tenure still represents the longest tenure of continuous service in the history of the university.

Throughout his tenure, the appearance of the campus won commendation from the townspeople and visitors. The 1951 edition of The Obiter was dedicated to him: "For helping to create one of the most beautiful of the State Teachers Colleges; For his efficient service in maintaining this campus at the highest point possible the year round; For putting forth his maximum effort to fulfill the position of superintendent of grounds in the 45 years that he has served this institution."

Susie Rayos Marmon. Before she died in 1988 at age 110, Mrs. Marmon devoted much of her life to teaching her Laguna Pueblo people in New Mexico. In addition to teaching nearly a half Bloomsburg University is committed to providing equal educational and employment opportunities for all persons without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, ancestry, life style, affectional or sexual preference, handicap, Vietnam era status as veterans, or union membership. The university is additionally committed to affirmative action and will take positive steps to provide such educational and employment opportunities.

Come back for Homecoming

On January 1, 1989, the Sesquicentennial Celebration began with 150 peals of the bell in Carver Hall tower. Throughout the year, numerous events have been held in commemoration of this special time for the University.

The Gala Celebration continues on Friday, October 13, with Parents Weekend, followed by Community Weekend (October 20-22), and cresting with Homecoming Weekend (October 27-29). Check the Calendar of Events in this issue of the Quarterly for specific dates and times of activities.

Are you one of those alumni who hesitates coming back for Homecoming because you don't know what to expect? You're not sure if you'll "fit" into campus activities? You wonder what activities there are for you?

Treat yourself to an escape weekend from your daily lifestyle and come back to campus for a fun-filled weekend! You'll feel part of the activities and campus family whether you plan to meet other alumni or just trek on your own.

If you can return to campus on Friday afternoon, join the Alumni/Student/Faculty Mixer in the Kehr Union. And when did you last attend a pep rally? On Friday evening, help make this the largest Homecoming pep rally ever and enjoy the fireworks afterwards.

KLEMKOSKY

Plan for a full day of activities on Saturday. Be a participant in the Parade of Classes that will precede the Homecoming Parade at 10 a.m. Our objective is to have members of each graduating class meet at Market Square and walk (or ride) up Main Street to Carver Hall, where we will watch the parade. Be part of this special event! Please indicate on the Homecoming registration form in the Quarterly if you plan to participate.

After the parade, it's up to the Fenslemaker Alumni House for either Berrigan's subs or a picnic basket lunch under the tent. You'll also have an opportunity to participate in the dedication ceremonies of the Veterans' Memorial to honor those alumni and former students who served in the armed services. Don't miss seeing this beautiful tribute to our alumni veterans on the front lawn of the Alumni House.

Then it's off to the football game against Millersville or the soccer game against District of Columbia. Let's all cheer our Huskies to victory! Then, get refreshed and attend the annual Homecoming Dinner-Dance at the Days Inn in Danville (formerly the Sheraton).

Sunday activities begin with a non-denominational chapel service in Carver Auditorium with the Gospel Choir. Attend the dedication of the newly renovated Science Hall and tour the facility. Then, it's off to Mitrani Hall for an afternoon Pops Concert.

Mark your calendar now for Homecoming—October 27, 28 and 29! You are sure to want to make Homecoming Weekend an annual event for you and your family!

SCHOLARSHIP CREATED — A perpetual scholarship in memory of Elizabeth Andrus, widow of Dr. Harvey A. Andrus, has been created through a $10,000 gift from Harvey A. Andrus Jr. The annual scholarship has been designated for a Bloomsburg native who is also a graduate of Bloomsburg High School. Mrs. Andrus is shown here with President Harry Ausprich during his inaugural ceremony in 1986.

Freshman-to-be killed in crash

In June, a young man who was to be a freshman at Bloomsburg this year was killed in an auto accident. Plans to create a scholarship in his memory have been announced by James Wagnagiris, Class of 1970, who earned a master's degree at BU in 1974.

"On June 6, 1989, our Bloomsburg University family lost a new friend. Brian Van Horn of Weatherly, who was slated to be a freshman business student this fall, died as a result of an auto accident while on his way to high school graduation practice.

"An honor student at Marian High School in Hometown, Brian developed a strong interest in business while working part time at High Elevations, a restaurant in the Pocono Mountains. A keen observer of sports, Brian enjoyed playing both basketball and baseball, and he has expressed excitement about the opportunity to learn more about college wrestling at Bloomsburg.

"In his 17 years of life, Brian demonstrated a strong sense of humor, was always quick with a quip and a knowing smile. His pastor, Rev. William Shields, said, 'To know Brian was to love him.'

"His loss to us as a university family goes unmeasured. Although his flame of learning has been extinguished, the memory of the warmth provided by that light remains bright.

"In memory of Brian, a scholarship fund has been created within the Bloomsburg University Foundation. Gifts may be sent to the following address: Brian Van Horn Memorial Scholarship Fund, Carver Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815."

Ball is a great success

One hundred sixty-eight faculty, staff, alumni and friends joined President and Mrs. Harry Ausprich for the annual President's Ball at the Willow Run Inn, Berwick. The event raised nearly $5,500 for university scholarships.

Foundation funds projects

A total of $45,000 has been appropriated by the Bloomsburg University Foundation to help fund scholarships and activities for the University Scholars Program, faculty and staff development programs during the 1989-1990 academic year.

"The board is pleased to provide financial support for these fine programs," said Anthony Ianiero, executive director of the foundation and the university's director of development. "Programs such as the University Scholars Program are important to this institution and really excite our board members."

Funding proposals for the last quarter were submitted in writing to the board during the months of April, May and June, he said.

For the fourth consecutive year, the board agreed to provide financial support for the University Scholars Program. The grant of $18,000 includes provisions for 24 freshmen and sophomore scholarships worth $750 each for the upcoming academic year.

The board also approved proposals of $17,000 by the faculty development program and $5,000 by the staff development committee to fund seminars, workshops and other activities during academic year 1989-1990.

Also, this year's seventh annual High School Bowl was awarded a $1,000 scholarship grant. The scholarship will be administered to the high school that wins the 16-team quick-recall event held during the school year. Terms of the scholarship state that the high school can distribute the award to any member of its senior class who enrolls at BU as a freshman in the Fall 1990 semester.

In addition, the board met a $4,000 challenge by the Community Government Association to purchase a special collection of books for the Harvey A. Andrus Library.

According to Daniel Vann, dean of library services, the foundation and CGA gifts, coupled with a $1,000 donation from a private benefactor, will recognize the contributions of University Medallion recipients Richard Benefield, Eda Bessie Edwards, John and Helen Lanning, and the late Marco and Louise Mirani.

"We are delighted with this gift because it honors those who have supported the library strongly," said Vann. "The books acquired will greatly benefit our faculty, staff and students."

The purpose of the foundation is to aid the university in achieving its educational objectives through support from the private sector. Its board of directors consists of 27 members, several of whom serve in an advisory capacity.

The following corrections to the Annual Fund Report, printed in the last issue of The Alumni Quarterly, are acknowledged with our apologies:

Donna Polak Zimmerman '83 and her husband, Michael William Zimmerman, were omitted from the list of Centennial Club contributors.

Dr. Robert Warren, faculty emeritus, should have been listed among the Carver Tower contributors.

J. Calvin Walker, faculty member, should have been listed among the Long Porch contributors.

Associated Management Insurance should have been listed among the Maroon & Gold contributors.

Francis J. Sheehan '52 should have been listed among the Maroon & Gold contributors.

Alumni couple sets up scholarship

Fran and Bernie Young, Class of 1936, have given $5,000 to the Bloomsburg University Foundation to establish a perpetual scholarship in their names. The Fran and Bernie Young Secondary Education Scholarship will be given in alternate years to a junior or senior secondary education student majoring in foreign languages one year and geography the next. The recipients must have at least a 3.0 cumulative average.

Both Fran and Bernie devoted their lives to education before retiring in 1980 from the University of Wisconsin at LaCrosse, where they served as library technician and professor of education respectively.

Early in his career, Bernie taught in Point Township, Northumberland, and Spring Glen, Pa., and in Somerville and Bloomfield, N.J. At various times he taught English, geography and history and was a guidance counselor and coordinator. Moving to Western Illinois State University, he taught geography and social studies and was also on the faculty of the campus laboratory school. From 1946 to 1980, he was involved in teacher preparation programs at Western Illinois, the University of Illinois and the University of Wisconsin at LaCrosse. On the Wisconsin faculty for 27 years, he served as director of the campus laboratory school and as dean of the College of Education.

Bernie earned a master's degree at Bucknell University and a doctor of education degree at the University of Illinois.

Fran, the former Frances Biggs, was a teacher of Latin, French and English.

In making the gift, Bernie noted: "Fensty (Howard F. Fenstermaker) was a favorite of Fran's and a friend to me. I especially was influenced by Dr. Maupin, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Buchheit and Dr. Russell. What success we have had as educators and as people, we credit heavily to these faculty members."

The Youngs live at 4607 Juniper Street, LaCrosse, WI 54601.

Distinguished Service Awards

William W. Hummel '47

Dr. Hummel's name is synonymous with "history" in the Reading area, where he served on the faculty of Albright College for 28 years and where he has written and spoken extensively on historical topics.

"Like most of my colleagues in the field," Dr. Hummel notes, "my career as an academic historian began in high school when I developed a keen interest in the history of my community — Espy in particular and Columbia County in general. This interest continued through undergraduate and graduate school.

"Believing that the important generalizations of national history are verified or refuted on the local level, I have devoted my life to the restoration of local history as a legitimate pursuit of the academic historian. It was this premise that guided my activities both as editor of the Historical Review of Berks County and as the chairman of the Committee on Archives and Research of the Pennsylvania Historical Association. My doctoral dissertation was devoted to the political career of Senator Charles R. Buckalew and my first major article dealt with the Fishingcreek Confederacy."

Dr. Hummel is particularly proud of the influence he has had on his students. "Over the years many of my former students have pursued careers in the teaching profession. A considerable number of these students have been awarded Ph.D. degrees in the field of history. Over the past twenty years, nearly forty of my students have published papers as undergraduates at Albright College. This, I believe, is a unique record among professors in colleges that offer only the baccalaureate degree.

"My willingness to pursue a college teaching career and my defense of this profession in an age of materialism has not gone unnoticed by my students. My son, who teaches mathematics in the Reading Public Schools, has always insisted that I served as his model in choosing a teaching career."

A native of Espy, Dr. Hummel was graduated from Scott Township High School in 1940. After studying at Dickinson College for one year, he returned to Bloomsburg to attend the Teachers College. In 1943, however, his studies were interrupted by World War II. From February 1943 to January 1946 he served with the United States Army 94th Signal Battalion, 3rd Corps, 3rd Army, in the European Theater. From October to December 1945 he was able to study at Shrivenerham American University in Shrivenerham, England. After the war, he resumed his studies at Bloomsburg and was graduated in 1947.

He earned a master of arts degree in history at Bucknell University in 1949 and a doctor of philosophy degree in history at the University of Pittsburgh in 1963. While working on his doctorate at Pittsburgh, he was a teaching fellow from 1951 to 1954 and a research fellow from 1954 to 1956.

Like many Bloomsburg students, his first part-time job of record was at the Weis Markets. After graduating in 1947, he worked from September to December as an historical information assistant at Colonial Williamsburg. From 1949 to June 1950 he was a housemaster at Girard College in Philadelphia. His first teaching experience came as a temporary faculty member of Geneva College in Beaver Falls from January to May 1951.

After completing the graduate fellowships at the University of Pittsburgh, he worked at the Johnstown Center of the university from 1956 to 1958. He then served the Patton Masonic School for Boys in Elizabethtown from 1958 to 1960, including a year as acting superintendent.

Dr. Hummel was appointed to the faculty of Albright College in 1960 and was promoted to full professor in 1970. He retired as professor emeritus in 1988.

He has been active in a number of professional organizations, including the Historical Society of Berks County, the Pennsylvania Historical Association, the Historical Foundation of Pennsylvania, the Organization of American Historians, the American Historical Association and the Reading World Affairs Council.

HUMMEL

He served as editor of the Historical Review of Berks County from 1969 to 1973 and as chairman of the Committee on Archives and Research, Pennsylvania Historical Association, from 1969 to 1974, and as a member of the Council of the Pennsylvania Historical Association.

The American Society for State and Local History presented a distinguished citation to the Pennsylvania Historical Association's Committee on Archives and Research while Dr. Hummel was chairman. He also received a special resolution from the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission for distinguished service as chairman of the committee.

The Historical Society of Berks County presented him with an Outstanding Service Citation for his preparation of a special index to the History of Ber's County, Pennsylvania.

Over the years, Dr. Hummel has written extensively on historical topics, including "The Political Philosophy of Charles R. Buckalew," which appears in the 1989 edition of Carver, an interdisciplinary journal published by Bloomsburg University. Buckalew was the U. S. Senator who built the house which is now home to Bloomsburg University's presidents, named Buckalew Place.

He is also editing "The Arctic Diary of Levi W. Mengel," and is working on a history of popular culture in America.

An artist specializing in collage, he has had three one-man shows at Albright College since 1970, as well as a one-man show at the Abraham Lincoln Hotel in Reading in the early 1970s. In 1988 he did a one-hour demonstration show on Berks County Television. His pictures have been exhibited in annual juried art shows sponsored by Berks County Art Alliance, Reading Public Museum and Art Gallery in 1983, 1984, and 1987.

He has been an elder, music committee member and adult Sunday School teacher at First Presbyterian Church in Reading.

He and his wife, the former Patricia A. Hostetter, were married in August 1962. They are the parents of two children: William W. Jr. and Mary Louise. They reside at 1606 Olive Street in Reading.

Emory W. Rarig Jr. '51

Perhaps nothing sums up Emory Rarig better than something that happened in 1984. In that year the executive council of the State Phi Beta Lambda created the "Dr. Emory W. Rarig Jr. Enthusiasm Award," which is given annually to the most enthusiastic team participating in the State Leadership Conference. And any Bloomsburg graduate who has ever witnessed Dr. Rarig leading a group of alumni in singing out "Alma Mater" knows how aptly that word describes him!

Hard work and dedicated service have been earning recognition for Dr. Rarig ever since he was named valedictorian of the Class of 1944 at Locust Township High School in Numidia. His performance as a student at Bloomsburg State Teachers College earned him election to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges (1951) and the Husky Award for service to the college (1951).

The chronology of awards and recognition since then is a long one:

Received a competitive Kellogg Fellowship at Teachers College, Columbia University (1963-1968);

Recognized by the Pennsylvania State Education Department for service to vocational education (1976);

Given the Silver Medal Award for 10 years of service as a trustee at the Lackawanna Junior College in Scranton (1979);

Recognized by the Pennsylvania State Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda for outstanding service and dedication (1980);

Listed in Who's Who in Finance and Industry, (1981-1982 and 1982-1983);

Listed in International Who's Who Among Intellectuals, Cambridge, England (1982 and 1983);

RARIG

Designated "Trustee Emeritus" for 12 years of service to Lackawanna Junior College (1983);

Earned Distinguished Service Award from Pi Omega Pi National in recognition of 15 years as advisor to Alpha Delta Chapter at BU;

Named "Advisor of the Year" by the executive council of the Pennsylvania Phi Beta Lambda (1987);

Featured as an "Advisor Profile" in Tomorrow's Business Leader, the national magazine of the Future Business Leaders of America/Phi Beta Lambda (1987);

Designated "Dean Emeritus" of the College of Business at Bloomsburg University (1985);

Elected to life membership in Phi Beta Lambda (1988);

Named "Educator of the Year" by the Pennsylvania Business Education Association (1988).

The last award must mean a great deal to Dr. Rarig, for his whole life has been devoted to teaching. This life-time commitment was made early: "My motivation for pursuing a teaching career was very simple and direct. My formal education began in a rural, one-room school house. I attended that same school for my first eight grades [and] I took all of those eight years from the same teacher! One-third of my formal education (the most important beginning) was in the hands of just one teacher. That one teacher really determined my entire future. How wonderful that I was fortunate to have a good one! What better example could I have of the importance of teaching as a profession that

Former alumni office secretary honorary alumna Elizabeth H. LeVan

In the years before Bloomsburg University had a full-time director of alumni affairs, Betty LeVan was often the link between Bloomsburg and its graduates. Working in a tiny office opposite the post office in Old Waller Hall, she kept track of alumni using her always reliable, pre-computer age index card file (to which we still occasionally refer). She provided invaluable help to Howard Fenstermaker '12 and Millard Ludwig '48 during their tenures as president of the Alumni Association in the 1960s and 1970s. In short, she was the Alumni Office!

Even after Donald A. Watts '37 became the first full-time executive director in 1975, Betty continued to be an invaluable resource person in addition to being a hard-working, efficient secretary. After years of corresponding with alumni and meeting them at campus functions, she knew hundreds of names and faces.

As the years passed, bringing more alumni, more alumni programs, and computerized records, Betty provided a sense of continuity in the Alumni Office. It was always easy to ask Betty how something was done in the past or if she remembered so-and-so! Through all her 19 years of service to the Alumni Association, it was hard to believe that she was not an alumna herself, for she demonstrated great pride in the school and unmatched loyalty to the Alumni Board of Directors.

A native of Lakewood, Ohio, she was graduated from Wooster College in 1943. She moved to the Bloomsburg area in 1955 and began working in the Dean of Students office at BSC in 1962. After about two years, she left that assignment to work part-time for the Alumni Association. During the years that followed, the job became full-time, and the office moved to "new" Waller Hall and then to Carver Hall (two locations there).

After serving the Alumni Association for 19 years, Betty retired in 1983. Since then, she has enjoyed the freedom to do things around her home in Buckhorn, to travel, and to be a grandmother and great-grandmother.

Since Betty retired, she has lost her husband, Ray, to whom she was married in 1964, and her daughter, Kathryn (Katie). The rest of her family includes a son, Robert Dailey of Bethlehem; two step-daughters, Claudette Lyons and Arlene Swisher; a grandson, a granddaughter, step-grandchildren and step-great-grandchildren.

prepares and guides young people toward future success. That was my motivation to become a teacher.

"Having been born and raised at the very peak of the Great Depression and having experienced first hand the devastating effect poor economic circumstances exerted on young people and their futures, it was a very easy and sound decision for me to become a business teacher."

Finishing high school during World War II, he enlisted in the U. S. Navy and trained as an electronics technician. At the end of the war, he switched to yeoman's work and was discharged in 1947 as yeoman third class.

After graduating from Bloomsburg in 1951, Dr. Rarig taught at Mechanicsburg Area Senior High School from ten years. For the next seven years he studied at Teachers College, Columbia University, where he earned a master's degree (1963) and a doctorate (1968). During those years at Columbia, he served as an administrative assistant, research assistant, graduate assistant and Kellogg Fellow. In the final year, he instructed a graduate course at the Community Junior College.

In 1968, he returned to his Alma Mater in Bloomsburg to serve as director of the business education division of the college. In 1970 he was named dean of the College of Business, a position he held until 1985. During the final three years on the Bloomsburg faculty, he was professor of management and director of the M.B.A. program. He has played an active role in numerous professional and community organizations, as well as St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Numidia. He currently serves the church both as chairman of the finance committee and as organist.

Dr. Rarig and his wife, Betty, reside at 236 West Third Street in Bloomsburg.

"It had taken me eight years and three months to get through college. I think this story has merit today for young people in that through perseverance and hard work one can accomplish much."

Mr. Taylor's teaching career began in 1946 at Mifflinville High School, where he taught and coached for three years before joining the faculty of Berwick Senior High School in 1949. That same year, he earned a master's degree at Bucknell University. During the next nine years he served as a business teacher, wrestling coach, faculty treasurer of athletics, and secondary curriculum consultant.

In 1958 he was named principal of the Berwick Junior High Schools, and in 1961 he became principal of the senior high school. He held that position until his retirement in 1977. In 1976 he served as acting superintendent.

In addition to being active in a number of professional organizations, he has performed public service with the Mental Health and Family Counseling Board (past president), the Columbia-Montour Home Health Services (Distinguished Service Award), Columbia-Montour Boy Scouts of America Executive Council, the Berwick Area Civil Defense Board, the North Central Heart Association, and the Greater Delaware Regional Medical Board.

Prior to moving to Florida, he was a member of the Mifflinville Lions Club (founding president), the American Legion, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and the Mifflinville Methodist Church (administrative board chairman and teacher). The Jaycees presented him with a meritorious service award for educational accomplishments.

Even in retirement, he continues to serve others as chairman of the Seminole Christian School Board and as a counselor at the Tampa Suicide and Crisis Center.

Mr. Taylor is married to the former Ekla M. Hemie, Class of 1941. "I value that farm girl, a student at BSTC, who encouraged and stuck with me through my years at college and the war, married me, and gave me two fine Christian sons (who took some graduate work at BSC), who are now prominent doctors." The Taylors live at 3-15 Moran Road in Tampa, close to their sons, Frank and James, and their 10 grandchildren.

Frank M. Taylor '43

Like many Bloomsburg graduates, Mr. Taylor devoted his life to educating young people — as a teacher, coach and principal. But his road to fulfilling a dream — a college education — was difficult, a true lesson in perseverance for all who are sometimes tempted to give up. In his own words:

"I think that if young people were to peruse my career, which begins as an ordinary kid in the west end of Berwick, they will see a determination to succeed and persevere which is worth emulating.

"I was graduated from high school in 1935. These were depression times, and there was no chance for further education. My father died shortly thereafter, leaving my mother with four sons at home. I resolved then that no matter how many years it took me, I was going to have a college education. Through work as a delivery boy, prize fighting (which paid poorly), and odd jobs, I saved $300 and entered BSTC in 1937. I was financially depleted by 1939 and could not return that fall.

"Through my college training, I had gained typing and other clerical skills. I was able to get an office job at the A. C. & F. in Berwick, my home town. About that time, the plant received a huge order for war tanks. So in 1939 I switched from the office job to a night shift job in the war tank division, where I worked nights for the next two and a half years. At the same time, I reentered college. Continuing this regimen, I was able to complete my college work, including student teaching, by August of 1943. Six days after receiving my degree, I was in the Army Air Force under the Aviation Cadet program. I was discharged in October of 1945 as a second lieutenant.

"While I was going to college and working nights, I was also able to complete two flying courses under the Civilian Pilot Training Program which included attending night school classes at Wilkes Junior College and flying out of Wilkes-Barre Municipal Airport. This was all government sponsored and funded. It is a complicated story of just how this all fit in, but it had a lot to do with going without sleep. It was possible only through the cooperation of many friends, especially on the college faculty, where my endeavors were recognized at the time as commendable.

Alumni speakers share experiences

Four graduates of Bloomsburg University returned to campus this summer to share their experience and knowledge with current students. David London, Chuck Karnes, Michael Dillon, and Elaine Graham each spent an evening as guest lecturer in the seminar course "Interviewing Principles and Practices." According to Dr. Mary Kenny Badami, Department of Communication Studies, the sixteen undergraduate and graduate students in the course enjoyed the interaction with alumni and the opportunity to hear some secrets of success.

David London's presentation, "The Art of Being Interviewed," focused on a student's first job interview. He reviewed the preparation process, described some typical and some unusual patterns for interviews, and suggested followup strategies for the interviewee. The class particularly enjoyed a segment on what London termed "surviving killer questions," such as "What is your greatest weakness?" or "What was your biggest mistake in life?" Since graduating from Bloomsburg in 1972 with a degree in English, London has worked as a teacher, a corporate employee, and entrepreneur, and a retail sales manager. He recently returned to BU, graduating in August 1988 with an M.A. degree in Communication. He is now in the second year of a Ph.D. program in Speech Communication at The Pennsylvania State University.

Chuck Karnes presented a session on "Job Searches and Job Interviews." Graduating from Bloomsburg in 1982 with a degree in mass communication, he first worked in retail sales and then made a career switch into health care recruiting. At present he is responsible for program development, marketing, and public relations for InSpeech, Inc. of Valley Forge, Pennsylvania.

Karnes told students that the same communication skills taught in persuasion and advertising courses should be used in strategizing one's job search. He recounted the mistakes and successes in his own first efforts: leaving Bloomsburg for Philadelphia, with no job prospects, two days after graduation. Students talked with him about the uses and abuses of placement agencies, the problems of responding to want ads, and the importance of networking. One student said that the session was "especially interesting since it was from his own business experiences." Another called the evening informative, adding, "It was very reassuring to know that a Communication Studies degree has wealth or potential for many different companies."

According to Badami, "Chuck Karnes practices what he preaches. His lecture stressed the importance of maintaining a network of contacts and of seeking opportunities to help others through a mentor relationship. Well, he phoned me last year offering an internship opportunity to a current Bloomsburg student. After looking at several resumes, he selected Cyndi Weiss, a double major in psychology and mass communications, for a summer internship with InSpeech. That's the kind of initiative we appreciate, when a BU alumnus helps to create opportunities for our current students."

Third of the alumni speakers was Michael J. Dillon, who graduated from the M.A. Program in Communication in 1983. Michael has been visible locally and regionally for several years as a reporter, columnist, editor, and investigative journalist for the Press-Enterprise newspaper in Bloomsburg. He has just entered the interdisciplinary Ph.D. program in Mass Communication at The Pennsylvania State University, receiving a teaching assistantship.

Dillon began by stating his philosophical assumption: "The journalist is a professional citizen, asking questions on behalf of the people." He described how a reporter might pose questions to various categories of respondents, giving examples from his investigative reporting on the tragic starvation death of a 3-year-old child. Asked about the balance between speaking and writing in journalism, he replied, "While I pride myself on being a good writer, interviewing is essential to being a good reporter." After the session, students said that they were impressed with his experience, his courage, and his ethical commitment.

"A Consumer Approach to the Health Care Interview" was presented by Elaine Graham, who drew from her background as a registered nurse with an undergraduate degree in Sociology (Bloomsburg 1986) and an M.A. in Communication (Bloomsburg 1987). Since receiving her master's degree, she has taught for the Alumni board hosts senior picnic

North to the Arctic: BU expedition

By ROY H. SMITH
Director, BU Quest Program

(At the end of June in 1989 the Bloomsburg University Alaska Expedition drifted through the delta of the Hulahula River into the Arctic Ocean. A journey of almost two hundred miles which had begun on the southern edge of the Alaska Brooks Range four weeks earlier was over.)

The ancient Greeks wrote of far away northern lands beyond the edge of the known world, of a land of eternal snow, and winters without sunshine.

When the first European whalers sailed into the Beaufort Sea in the late 19th century they met a race of people who enquired of their origin. Where have you come from they asked? Are you come from the sun, the moon, from where? They were the Inuit Eskimos, a name which means the people. Believing they were the only ones on earth they were baffled by the strange bearded visitors who had arrived in their large wooden boats with sails like clouds driven by the wind.

Our arrival in the Arctic Tundra was by iron birds from the sky. What would those earlier Eskimo have thought of us?

The roar of the Helio Currier's 12-cylinder engine broke the early summer silence over the upper Sheenjek Valley, 100 miles north of the Arctic Circle. A thousand feet below us, against a background of snow covered mountains we could see the brown, broad winged Otter carrying eight other members of the expedition. Our landing strip, only discernible to the seasoned eye of our bush pilot, was a short gravel bar scoured relatively level by a late spring snow run-off on the East bank of the Sheenjek River. We were in the heart of the 19-million acre Arctic National Wildlife Refuge which straddles the Eastern Brooks Range, its northern flank extending across 60 miles of open tundra to the very edge of the Arctic Ocean.

It took three trips by the Helio Currier and one in the Otter to land all 19 members of the expedition. The roar of the departing Otter's engine receded, leaving us alone in an overwhelmingly large and silent world.

We now had to find a way out from the upper Sheenjek River into the Upper Chandalar drainage, and then North across the Brooks Range to a prearranged food resupply drop on the upper Hulahula River. We had ten days to do it. If we didn't we'd be hungry. From the headwaters of the Hulahula we planned to travel north by raft, out of the mountains, and on across the coastal plains to the Arctic Ocean. A ten-mile paddle on the Beaufort Sea, following the coastline of the Arctic Ocean would take us to Barter Island,

An expedition of 19 is perhaps too large and difficult to manage harmoniously. Originally we had talked about breaking the group into two teams but the plan foundered for want of a second leader who had experience in the mountains. My wife, Brenda, and two sons, Jed (11) and Bridger (9) were part of the team. I'd been away on too many expeditions in the past, and we had decided it was time we all went along together. Jim Dalton, a BU psychology professor, was along — fulfilling his dream to visit the Brooks Range and at the same time incorporating a field component on a psychology of adjustment course — very appropriate in view of the month ahead together. Most of the students were involved in the course.

Nothing prepares one for the overwhelming loneliness and emptiness of the Arctic. It is one of the last great wilderness areas left on the planet, protected through the millennia by its remoteness, paucity of resources, and severity of climate. Sixty degrees below zero is not uncommon here in the winter. The only human inhabitants of this land are the Inuit Eskimos whose villages are strung out along a thousand miles of coastline with a few inland Indian villages separated from each other by hundreds of miles of mountains and trackless tundra.

For the students, this is their first time to Alaska. What an introduction — one hundred miles north of the Arctic Circle in one of the most remote and inaccessible areas in North America. There are no roads here, only the trails of migratory caribou of the 175,000 Porcupine herd which make its annual trek between Canada, where they winter, and the Coastal Plains of Northeast Alaska.

But the silence that has persisted through the millennia may soon be shattered by the intrusion of the twentieth century. Controversy rages between conservation organizations and energy corporations on whether the coastal plains should enjoy the protection of wilderness status to deter the exploration for oil. Oil corporations are now anxious to drill in the coastal plains of the ANWR. A primary objective of the expedition was to take a first hand look at the area where drilling is proposed and to make our views known to Congress.

Arctic Village, the nearest Indian village, is more than a hundred miles to the south in another drainage and separated from us by a range of mountains, rivers and difficult terrain. Barter Island, where we plan to end the expedition lies almost 200 miles to the north on the edge of the Arctic Ocean. Hungry grizzlies fresh out of hibernation scrounge the treeless valley floors competing for anything edible with wolves, foxes and wolverines. We discussed the potential problems of grizzlies but decided not to carry guns. Thoughts of someone panicking and firing at a grizzly in a group of 19 made me feel uncomfortable. Instead, we decided to make do with the latest in bear repellent, a noxious mixture of which the most active element is cayenne pepper. This newly marketed bear spray has proven to be 100% effective in controlled tests. The only thing you have to be careful about is spraying into the wind, in which event you could provide a highly peppered meal for the bear.

The first day is always the hardest. The packs loaded with ten days of food, tents, stoves, and clothing for anticipated cold weather in the mountains are unbearably heavy.

This is new terrain to us all. We have no idea of potential problems, only that we have to cover around ten miles a day to make the resupply on time. Summer has been delayed by two weeks. There is still thick ice on sections of the rivers. We anticipate snow on the higher passes.

Some need help to get on the packs. We wade the cold snow melt water of the Sheenjek River and head in the direction of a large open mouthed valley which spills into the Sheenjek from the West.

The lower valley floor is wet. Those without waterproof boots will have soaking feet all day. We discover there is no greater impediment to progress across the perpetually damp Arctic tundra than the tussock. These less than knee high pedestals of roots, grass, more roots and then more grass, seem to be arranged in a fashion so as to deter progress. They are particularly prolific in poorly drained areas which means they are virtually everywhere.

The permafrost which extends to more than 1000 feet below the surface prevents drainage of water to the sub surface. Only the top few inches of the tundra ever thaws creating endless bogs. Moving between tussocks is difficult because of their proximity to each other. Attempting to stand on top of one tussock and stride to the next is quickly doomed to failure.

Not having sufficient strength to sustain the weight of a grown person carrying a pack, they bend or collapse throwing the unfortunate victim to the ground. Upside down hikers were not uncommon for the first few days. After several weeks of laboring through tussock gardens, I began to see tussocks as families; mothers, fathers and small tussocks as children, all with their ridiculous unkempt hair extending down over averted eyes, all snickering at our misfortunes.

We stop briefly on dry sloping hillside for lunch — cheese, pilot biscuits, peanut butter, and dried fruit. The land is brown and bare with scarcely a hint of spring. Willow buds are starting to uncurl and the alpine lupins are showing their distinctive palmate leaves but it is still too early for flowers.

Looking back across the glaciated open valley, beyond the braided river bed we have just crossed, we see an occasional caribou moving up the Sheenjek River taking a route along the base of large scree and boulder fields. Presumably they are heading for the North Slope of the Brooks Range and then on to the Coastal Plains by way of the Jago or Hulahula River Valleys. The cows will have their calves on the coastal plains where they will grow strong and fat on the abundant lichens and grasses. With the onset of Fall the herd will retrace its route over the British Mountains back into Canada where they will winter in the boreal forests.

Such is the life of a caribou; birth, on the relatively warm coastal plains and then the annual migration from the summers of the midnight sun to the bitter cold, sunless months of winter. It is an arduous life in pursuit of food. Some will die of natural causes, some in the jaws of wolves and grizzlies. Others will be shot by the Eskimo to fill the long winter's larder. Others will be shot by non Eskimo hunters who fly in by tundra bush planes and pay $300 for the privilege of shooting one. We are content to watch them.

This is a land where the only trails are those of caribou, wolves, and grizzly. An entire day was spent trying to force a route up one valley only to be forced back by late melting accumulations of avalanche snow and dangerous terrain. Weary, we retraced our steps to our camp of the previous night. The following day it almost seemed we would run into similar difficulties, but we persevered and were able to push through to a high snow covered pass. We saw stragglers of the Porcupine caribou herd making their way to the Coastal plains on the fringe of the Arctic Ocean.

On the upper Sheenjek we almost had a potentially dangerous encounter with a grizzly sow and her yearling cubs, but at the last moment she smelled us and broke away at a run. We watched her gallop away for almost a mile before she stopped. Her cubs ran in opposite directions.

One night an Arctic fox raided our food supply and stole a five-pound chunk of cheese. We watched it return in the morning to within a 100 yards of camp to pick up a piece it had hidden.

Several times we had to negotiate overflow ice, a spectacular phenomenon where subsurface water continues to flow over the top of the river ice and accumulates, sometimes to a thickness of 15 feet or more. The ice will spread across the valley floor sometimes for several miles. Great chunks would periodically break away at the edges with ominous crashes. We walked cautiously over the more solid sections of ice where progress was easier than across the bogs and tussocks of the tundra. Three days later we climbed out of the Sheenjek River drainage in pouring rain, crossing a pass which took us into the Chandalar River drainage. The journey continued across the mountainous tundra, across more overflow ice — which was now becoming increasingly rotten and dangerous to walk on.

Our last important pass would allow us to enter the Hulahula drainage where our food drop was planned. Several students had scouted ahead the previous night and had reported the route to the pass was impossible. They told me of mountain slopes which drooped over the precipitous sides of a deep gorge carved by the river. Access up the gorge, they reported, was impassable on account of waterfalls. It didn't sound too good. Were we trapped? How would we get out? We had to make the resupply. We didn't have enough food to get out to Arctic Village. We had a radio, but who would we call? These thoughts raced through my mind as I lay in my sleeping bag. Restless and with little sleep, I was up early and decided to investigate the east side of the gorge which no one had yet looked at — all the dire predictions had come from reconnaissance on the west bank.

There is an old maxim "listen but take a look yourself." I discovered the east bank of the river to be possible and not too difficult. It would be strenuous with several streams to cross, and steep terrain, but nothing like the west side of the river which looked dangerous.

The glaciated walls of the valley swept up into the clouds. It was spectacular, something a Hudson River Artist might have conceived to depict the rugged wildness of the American West. Cascading waterfalls plunged between the black tomb-like walls of inaccessible hanging valleys. Grey mists and clouds drifted over the mountains, obscuring distant, snow covered summits. The rain began again as we climbed out of the gorge towards the pass a thousand feet above us. Guilbeau pass is named after a black man who more than 30 years ago who disappeared while travelling alone through the range on skis. His half-eaten remains and a boot were found several years later. It was assumed he had been killed and eaten by a grizzly.

Crossing the pass was one of our longest and most arduous days. We trudged through a stark, late winter landscape, sometimes through knee deep snow, and water which swilled into our boots chilling us to the bone. I was concerned that my boys, only half the size of the rest of us might suffer from hypothermia, but they seemed blithely unconcerned by the cold and dampness.

In the late afternoon we thankfully crossed over the pass and camped. The weather deteriorated as we set up camp. Heavy mists raced up the valley pushed by a chilling wind off the Arctic Ocean. Dinner of flour and corn tortillas and beans, had never tasted better, swilled down by mugs of full cream powdered milk laced with carob chips.

That night it snowed. A brief break in the weather the following morning allowed us to quickly break camp and head north to lower ground towards our resupply, only a couple of days away. Snow and sleet started to fall around noon. As the afternoon wore on a driving, bitter cold wind began to blow making progress unpleasant. Concerned about the group getting split up and the potential for hypothermia, at 3 p.m. we threw up the tents and climbed inside for shelter. Snow continued to fall throughout the night.

We awoke to a clear blue sky but still twelve miles from our resupply point, a level strip on a gravel somewhere on the west bank of the Hulahula River. The snow had delayed our expected arrival, and I was concerned that the plane would arrive, not find us, and leave. Jim had to get out to return to teaching obligations at Bloomsburg, so we sent him ahead with half of the students to make a forced march to the resupply spot while the rest of us followed. What a hectic day. The terrain was awful. Twelve miles of knee high tussocks, bogs, and the fording of several river. All seemed to conspire against any of us ever making the resupply. Jim lost his balance on one of the river crossings and was swept away in the glacially cold river and drenched to the waist. But, they made it. The bush plane had seen us struggling down the valley and had waited. We now had food for another 20 days and three rafts to take us down the Hulahula River to the Arctic Ocean.

Snow fell that night. Our first rest day since we started was spent in tents sheltering from a raw wind blasting in from the Arctic Ocean.

Our plan was to reach the Arctic Ocean by rafts and then paddle east along the coastline for ten miles to Barter Island. Three rafts and 18 people, plus all their gear, was a transportation problem we remedied by asking for volunteers each day to trek ahead and meet us at prearranged landmarks near the river.

The Hulahula bustles along at around six miles an hour and is a relatively shallow river. The river bottom, littered with well worn limestone and granitic looking boulders, presented only minor navigational problems. Where the river became a braided series of channels, the big problem was selecting the deepest route. If we didn't, the crew had too jump out in the river and haul the raft into deeper water. Along some sections, frozen overflow ice from the previous winter formed 10-foot cliffs of ice alongside the river. After a delayed summer, large sections were now starting to break away. The prospect of being crushed by a block of ice kept us alert and in the center of the river. It was an eerie feeling entering those frozen canyons, never knowing if the river would eventually flow under the ice.

The rafts looked like overloaded donkey carts. Packs, tents, and bags of food were lashed down in a huge pile in the center of the boats with scarcely enough room for the captain to sit at the stern and two paddlers in the forward compartment. Bridger and Jed somehow managed to find a place on top of all this.

Rafting is like riding a horse. You don't have to watch your feet and it gave those of us on the river a marvelous brought in 15 days of food for the second half of the expedition, and rafts which were used to travel 100 miles down the Hulahula River to the Arctic Ocean opportunity to look to see the country from another perspective and appreciate the beauty of the land. Dall sheep grazed on the mountains close to the river, feeding on patches of vegetation high among the sheer walls and crags where they retreat when in danger. The half eaten remains of a Dall sheep lay close to the river edge with red flesh still clinging to its vertebra — dinner for wolves or grizzly.

Our plan to paddle the rafts along the shore of the Arctic Ocean was thwarted by the late melting pack ice which closed in on the land and the Island, forcing us to drag the rafts inland to a small island in the delta. The rafts and paddles were used to mark out a 450-foot emergency landing strip on a level stretch of tundra in the hope we could persuade a Cessna Super Cub pilot to pick them up later. That night, without benefit of darkness, I lay awake and listened to the grinding and cracking of the frozen ocean only a half mile off shore.

It was hard to walk away from $5,000 worth of rafts, but we had to get to Kaktovik, an Eskimo village on Barter Island, and the rafts were too heavy to carry. Two branches of the Okpilak River had to be forded to get inland from the delta. A two-day trek across the featureless tundra brought us within sight of Barter Island whose southern tip lies only a quarter mile from the mainland. Unfortunately, that quarter mile gap of water was a checkerboard of open water and the previous winter's pack ice which was only then beginning to break up. Sliding beneath rotten sea ice into the Arctic Ocean was an unappealing way to finish the journey, but we had no alternative. I'd arranged hush planes — pre paid in Fairbanks a month earlier — to pick us up at Kaktovik the following day. We had to get across.

Some good reconnaissance work by two of the students revealed a possible safe access onto the ice and perhaps a way to the island. We had to try. Four of us, roped together so we could save anyone who might fall through the ice, very gingerly set out. We were nervous, but our confidence grew as we realized that the ice was fairly solid. We assiduously avoided the ominous looking holes at the bottom of the surface meltwater pools through which we could see the dark water of the Ocean. The holes were just big enough for a person to slip through. A daunting prospect!

Fortune favors the bold, sometimes! We tried different routes and eventually found a way through the maze of pools, rotten ice, and holes, marking the route with small pieces of driftwood. By late evening we were standing on Barter Island. By the time we had returned over the ice to the main group, a helicopter flown by the Alaska Division Wildlife — who were collecting wildlife data on the coastal plains — had landed and offered to ferry us across to the Island. They feared for our safety crossing the ice and we accepted their help. The month long journey was over.

Our arrival at Barter fortuitously coincided with the Kaktovik Eskimos' annual feast commemorating the passing of another long winter and the killing of a Bowhead Whale speared in the spring. Our long journey ended with people whose ancestors have inhabited the Arctic, oblivious of the rest of the world, for more than 10,000 years. The Kaktovik Eskimos still retain vital aspects of their ancient culture which enables them to find some meaning and accommodation with a world to which we now reluctantly, had to return.

This expedition represented an extraordinary opportunity for students to explore a little known and even less visited part of the planet. Just as importantly, it provided a unique opportunity for personal growth and a realization — certainly for many — that they could do far more and push harder than they ever thought possible. The students who were members of this expedition will, I believe, provide alternative role models for our larger student body, showing that there is a larger world beyond the campus where planning, risk taking, hard work, and often times courage, can have extraordinary results.

Anderson awarded grant

Wayne P. Anderson, chairperson of the department of chemistry, has been awarded a Petroleum Research Fund grant of $20,000 to conduct research in the field of computational chemistry—a discipline in which chemical systems are modeled on a computer.

The PRF grant, administered by the board of directors of the American Chemical Society for the period of May 1, 1989, through August 31, 1989, will help finance Anderson's research project entitled, "A Theoretical Investigation of Complexes of a Small Crown Ether and its Nitrogen and Sulphur Analogues."

His primary project goal is to determine whether complexes of the small crown ether possess unique characteristics that would warrant their preparation in a laboratory.

Sesquicentennial poster on sale

Bloomsburg University, celebrating its 150th birthday this year, has released a sesquicentennial art post suitable for framing to commemorate the year.

The poster, which is a reproduction of a painting of trees in the Susquehanna Valley created by former university art faculty member James DeVore, also features the sesquicentennial logo for the university and the year's theme, "A Legacy of Learning." The poster is for sale in the University Store.

John Walker, vice president for institutional advancement and chairman of the university's comprehensive sesquicentennial committee, said, "We are pleased that we could reproduce an artwork that not only was created by one of our former faculty members, but also one that depicts the area in which we live and reflects the theme and activities of the sesquicentennial."

The university is planning an international and local tree planting ceremony in October, along with a two-day symposium and teleconference on global and local environmental issues.

Retired professor dies

Herbert H. Relchard, associate professor of physics at BU from 1961 to 1971, died June 20 at age 83.

Prior to coming to Bloomshurg, he taught at Beall H.S. in Frostburg, Md., for five years, and in Allentown for 21 years. While teaching at Allentown, he was founder and first president of the Lehigh Valley Science Fair. He was past president of the Pennsylvania Science Teachers Association and collaborated in the creation of the Physical Science Study Committee's physics textbook series.

At Bloomshurg, he originated the physical science day for area teachers and students and was founder of the BU chapter of Sigma Phi Sigma, physics honorary society. He also started the physical science course for non-science majors and introduced the Harvard project physics for high school teachers.

Surviving are his wife, the former Edith M. Womer, to whom he was married 53 years; a son, David W.; a daughter, Mrs. James (Elaine) Hills; and two grandchildren.

Kehr Union being renovated

Refurbishing of the Kehr Union will be completed by the end of the year, according to John J. Trathen, director of student activities and the Kehr Union. Cost of renovations, about $250,000, will be funded from university store sales and a reserve fund set up when the union opened 16 years ago.

The project includes new carpeting, wall coverings and furniture, including a new information desk. The bowling alley on the ground floor is being converted to a meeting room with a non-alcoholic bar. The snack bar will be expanded to accommodate between 250 and 300 students, and a pizza shop will be installed.

A feasibility study is also under way for a $3 million dollar expansion project that would increase the size of the Union by 50 percent.

BU coaches honored

Three veteran coaches were honored during the annual "Day of Champions" banquet. The Husky Club's "Coach of the Year" award went to Charlie Chronister, who guided the 1988-1989 men's basketball team to a school record of 27 wins and five losses. The Huskies tied their highest national ranking, fifth, and Coach Chronister became the Pennsylvania Conference's all time winning coach with a 327-163 record.

Also honored were Jan Hutchinson (329-61 overall record) and Burt Reese (310-93) for reaching the 300-victory milestone earlier in their seasons.

O'Connor is trustee officer

Kevin M. O'Connor, executive director of Luzerne Intermediate Unit 18, has been elected vice chairman of the BU Council of Trustees. A resident of Plains, he was originally appointed to the trustees in February 1976 by Gov. Milton J. Shapp and served through December 1983. He was reappointed in February 1988 by Gov. Robert P. Casey.

He earned a bachelor's degree at Kings College and a master's degree at the University of Scranton.

Baird attends Harvard institute

John S. Baird, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, participated in the 1989 Institute for Educational Management at Harvard University this summer. The IEM is a professional development program for senior-level administrators of higher education institutions to analyze and explore issues and trends in the management of higher education.

Course on alcohol use/abuse offered

A new course, Alcohol: Use and Abuse, will be offered twice during the fall semester to Bloomsburg students. Because alcohol and drug use is a leading public health problem in the U.S. today and affects people in all walks of life, this course is intended for students in all disciplines.

The main purpose of the course is to help the students gain information for self-responsibility and responsible decision making regarding the use, or non-use of alcohol and other drugs. A comprehensive overview of alcohol use and misuse in the United States will be presented.

The nature of alcohol problems will be examined as well as sociocultural attitudes toward drinking. The development of alcoholism, its consequences, interventions, preventive measures and treatment strategies will be presented. Recovering alcoholics and drug addicts will be guest speakers, and students will be involved in independent field trips to community support groups.

Store employees honored

Eleven University Store employees were recognized at a recent dinner for their years of service to the store. Awards were given to Dawn Wright and Mary Boudman, 11 years; Helen Hopple, 13 years; Betty Jayne Catherman, Ann Conard and Dorothy Kirkendall, 15 years; William Bailey, 16 years; Loise Krum, 17 years; Shirley Oxenrider, 18 years; Edith Barton, 23 years; and June Ebricht, 25 years.

Football opener at JMU

The BU football team will open their 1989 season at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va., at 7 p.m. on Saturday, September 2. If you would like more information on the 1989 season, please contact the Husky Club office at 717-389-4663.

UM hosts wrestling tourney

The University of Maryland, College Park, will host the 1990 Division I wrestling championships on March 22, 23 and 24. For information about tickets or accommodations, please call Joy Bedosky at the Husky Club office, 717-389-4663.

Dean Howard Macauley looks ahead

As we prepare to move into the last decade of this century, change looms large in making that transition. Already several faculty members have retired, a few more are about to retire, and within the next year several more will retire. At the same time, we have been busy selecting new faculty members who are on the cutting edge of their disciplines and who will likely bring a variety of new ideas, perspectives and challenges to the institution. Coupled with the collective wisdom and sense of continuity with the past provided by the experienced faculty, the fresh enthusiasm and high spirits of these new faculty members should keep alive our commitment to excellence.

Curricular changes are also in the offing. The speech pathology and audiology program was modified recently to bring it into line with the new standards of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association. Essentially, the undergraduate program was revised to reflect a pre-professional baccalaureate degree in which the primary emphasis will be upon general education with a few introductory courses dealing with the profession of speech pathology and audiology. No professional courses or experiences will be provided at the undergraduate level. At the graduate level, course offerings have been expanded to reflect the changes in the profession in order to provide both the depth and breadth necessary to ensure a quality program.

MACAULEY

The master's degree, which now will include the professional courses and experiences, will culminate in a clinical externship and will enable a successful candidate to apply for the ASHA Certificate of Clinical Competence, state licensure as a health care provider, and teacher certification.

An honors program in professional studies will also be instituted in 1989-1990. Academically gifted and talented students enrolled in the health and teacher education curricula will be eligible to apply for acceptance into the program and would then have the opportunity to examine a topic in depth in a multidisciplinary seminar, completing the program in a two-semester research or creative project of independent study. In addition, opportunities for internships have been increased in teacher education and have begun to be offered in the health fields. Essentially, students can acquire discipline-related experience in an actual job setting while they also earn academic credit.

Accreditation visits also loom large in the near future. Having undergone recently a Middle States Association review in which both the teacher education and health services programs were cited as being "strong," we are now ready for reviews by the State Board of Nursing, the National League for Nursing (master's degree), and the Council on Education of the Deaf in 1989-1990. In the following year, the National Council on Accreditation of Teacher Education, the National League of Nursing, and the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association will be examining our programs. These periodic peer reviews are an important part of our self-examination and self-improvement, enabling us to reflect on the past, assess the present, and plan for the future.

Business dean appointed

Carol J. Matteson has been named dean of the College of Business, effective August 1. She succeeds John E. Dietrich, who resigned a year ago to accept a similar position at West Texas State University.

Robert Yori, chairman of the university's accounting department, served a second term as interim dean during the 1988-1989 academic year.

For the past two years, Matteson worked as an associate professor of business administration at the University of Maine at Augusta. She also served as a graduate faculty member in the MBA program at the University of Southern Maine and the MPA curriculum at the University of Maine, and facilitated courses in strategic management and planning, marketing and small business.

From 1974 to 1987, Matteson performed both administrative and faculty duties at Slippery Rock University. Her management positions included director of the Evening College and Continuing Education (1985-1986) and working as an assistant to the university's president (1978-1980). She also functioned as a tenured faculty member in the school's management and marketing department (1981-1987) and physical education departments (1974-1977).

She worked from 1968 to 1974 as a public school teacher at Sparta Merged Schools (Spartanburg) and Titusville High School, and as a lecturer in the teacher preparation program of the Stuart College of Advanced Education at Adelaide, South Australia.

She earned a Ph.D. degree in business administration from the Katz Graduate School of School at the University of Pittsburgh, an M.S. degree at the University of Oregon, and a B.S. degree at Slippery Rock.

Extended programs dean named

G. Michael Vavrek has been named dean of the School of Extended Programs, effective August 1. Prior to his appointment, he worked for eight years at East Tennessee State University in Johnson City.

During the 1988 academic year he was assistant dean of ETSU's School of Continuing Studies. From 1981 to 1988 he was director of the university's Kingsport campus and taught courses in school-community relations and self evaluation for the College of Education.

From 1978 to 1981, he worked as director of the Grand Rapids Regional Center for Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, where he was responsible for the institution's largest off-campus center.

Vavrek began his professional career in higher education at the University of Miami (Florida) in 1970. He supervised a co-ed residence hall complex and later served as assistant director of the School of Continuing Studies from 1971 to 1975.

A native of Gary, Indiana, he earned a doctor of philosophy degree in higher education at Syracuse University, an M.Ed. degree at the University of Miami, and a B.S. at Western Michigan.

Vavrek succeeds Daniel C. Pantaleo, who resigned in 1986 to become provost and vice president for academic affairs at Frostburg State University in Maryland. John H. Abell, assistant dean of extended programs, served as interim dean for the last three years.

Administrator appointed

Peter J. Kasvinsky has been appointed assistant vice president for graduate studies and research, effective August 14. Prior to his appointment, he worked as a faculty member and administrator at Marshall University in Huntington, W. Va., for nearly 10 years. For the past three years he functioned as director of research development and graduate studies for Marshall's School of Medicine and has served since 1979 in a teaching capacity in the school's department of biochemistry.

Previously, Kasvinsky taught general biochemistry courses for five years — 1974 to 1979 — to both graduate and undergraduate students at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Canada. He also worked as senior research associate for the institution's department of biochemistry.

He began his collegiate teaching career in 1972 at Wayne State University's School of Medicine in Detroit, Michigan, where he lectured and taught laboratories in general biochemistry to students majoring in allied health fields.

In addition, he served as a captain in the U.S. Army, and chief of the biochemistry branch of the Army's Medical Service Corps from 1969 to 1972 at its Aeronautical Research Laboratory in Fort Rucker, Alabama.

Kasvinsky, a native of Fairfield, Conn., earned a Ph.D. in biochemistry at the University of Vermont and a B.S. degree at Bucknell University.

Professor awarded grant

Physics professor James Moser has been awarded a National Science Foundation Grant totalling $89,000 over two years for studies of the effects of lightning and atmospheric water vapor.

Moser and his students hope to refine a technique they have developed whereby a temporary enhancement in the ionosphere caused by lightning can be detected on the ground using high frequency radio signals. Moser presented a paper at a recent meeting of the American Geophysical Union showing that high frequency radio signals can be more sensitive to slight changes in ionization than very low frequency signals, which are traditionally used by workers in this field.

Moser said the results of this research could lead to better understanding of environmental effects and improvements in such applications as radio and television communications and over-the-horizon radars, but it also will help to understand nature better.

Part of the NSF funding will be used to purchase an electronic clock that will receive signals from an atomic clock operated by the National Bureau of Standards in Boulder, Colorado. A time signal, transmitted from Fort Collins, will keep the new electronic clock synchronized with the atomic clock in Boulder, allowing physicists at BU to make extremely accurate measurements of time. Other money will be used to purchase a computer for data analysis and an additional very low frequency receiver.

Chip Callahan award presented

Jody A. Hoffman, a junior from Watonsontown, has been chosen to receive the 1989 Chip Callahan Award.

The award memorializes an art student who was fatally injured in a fall on campus in 1977. The award is presented annually to one full-time art major who is at least a sophomore and who has submitted a proposal for a special art project. Students are encouraged to use unusual materials for their specific art form.

Hoffman recently completed her independent study project involving self-portraiture in photography.

Nespoli named to SSHE board

Joseph Nespoli, member of the board of directors of the Bloomsburg University Foundation and former member of the Council of Trustees, has been appointed by Gov. Casey to serve on the State System of Higher Education Board of Governors.

Founder and owner of Nespoli Jewelers, Nespoli was appointed by Gov. Shapp as a trustee in 1971 and served in that capacity until 1983. His last four years as a trustee were served under Gov. Thornburgh. He was appointed to the Foundation board when President Auspich reactivated it in 1985.

Two appointed to Foundation board

R. Randolph May and Terrence R. Simmons were recently appointed to the board of directors of the BU Foundation, Inc.

May, a 1967 accounting graduate of BU, is president of Pinebrook Homes, Inc., in Danville. He has served on the advisory board of the university's College of Business since 1985 and was a member of the Husky Club's advisory board from 1984 to 1988. He presently serves as a council member of St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Danville.

Simmons is president of Terrence R. Simmons Associates, New Hope, a management consultant firm which he founded in 1977. He holds a degree in management and industrial relations from New York University, and has received professional training in organizational development at Princeton University and in industrial and labor relations at Cornell University.

The purpose of the foundation is to aid the university in achieving its educational objectives through support from the private sector. Its board of directors consists of 27 members.

Artists Series announced

The Warsaw Sinfonia with Sir Yehudi Menuhin as conductor will kickoff the 1989-1990 Celebrity Artist Series at Bloomsburg University on October 12. Robert McDuffie will be guest violinist.

The rest of the schedule is as follows:

"My Fair Lady" on October 14; Andre Watts, one of the world's leading pianists, on November 10; Northeastern Pennsylvania Philharmonic, including an original choral composition by Bernard Rands for the Sesquicentennial celebration, on November 17; the Hungarian State Folk Ensemble, 100 dancers from Hungary performing ethnic eastern European dances in their native costumes, on January 19; the Harlem Spiritual Ensemble, an event selected to help celebrate Black History Month, on February 25; The Academy of St. Martin's in the Field, the world's most recorded classical orchestra, on March 29; and "Kismet," a Broadway musical, on April 1.

For ticket information, call Nancy Vought at 717-389-4201.

century in a one-room school behind her house, she continued to urge her people to preserve their land, their tradition and their language, reminding them that "education is the best tool."

Born the only child of Indian parents in Paguate, N.M., in 1877, she was named Dawa-Go-Mai-Tsa. She was given the name Susie Rayos when she was sent to a mission in Albuquerque. After attending the Indian school in Carlisle, Pa., she entered Bloomsburg State Normal School to take the three-year teachers course. After teaching one year at Carlisle, the government sent her back to teach at Isleta in the New Mexico territory. She was later married to Walter Marmon, the son of a civil engineer from Ohio.

Mrs. Marmon exemplifies what one concerned person can do to change the lives of generations to follow. In 1972 the North American Indian Women's Association honored her as the outstanding woman in the field of education for her 50 years as a teacher at both Laguna and Isleta pueblos.

In 1987 New Mexico Governor Gary Carruthers proclaimed April 15 as "Susie Rayos Marmon Day," in recognition of efforts in advocating higher education among her people. In addition, the 19 New Mexico pueblo governors, through the All Indian Pueblo Council, honored her "for her untiring efforts on behalf of all Indian people."

Annie Taylor Marshall. While she was at Bloomsburg, one of Annie Taylor's professors recognized her musical abilities and encouraged her to go to Europe to study with a master under whom he had studied. Lacking the money to do so, she decided to accept a teaching assignment in her hometown area of Pottsville.

After saving enough money, she went to Florence, Italy, where Luigi Vannuccini accepted her as a student of grand opera. Using the name Annie Lariat, she made her initial appearance at Viareggio as Tosca in the opera of the same name. After a tour throughout Europe, Annie joined the Castellano Opera Company as the prima donna soprano. In 1911 in Milan, she married Charles Marshall, another American student of Vannuccini. By that time, her repertoire embraced more than 30 leading operatic roles. The Marshalls embarked on a two-year tour which touched most of the European capitals.

Settling in the United States in 1917, the Marshalls performed with the Brooklyn Opera Company and eventually joined the Chicago Opera Company, which later became the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Annie continued to tour with that company and several other American opera companies until 1931 when she retired from the operatic stage. By that time, her repertoire included 70 leading roles.

After retiring from the stage, she returned to teaching professionally. She entered the Chicago public school system where she was given charge of students with learning disabilities. She developed a system based on phonetics whereby these disabled children learned to read. She also taught at the Sherwood Music School and directed the choral of several Chicago area churches.

Department of Communication Studies and consulted with several health care agencies.

Stressing the importance of listening techniques, she advised students to be aware of nonverbal communication cues: "Listen with your eyes as well as your ears." According to Graham, "No other system in our society depends so much on interviews as the health care system. All subsequent activities depend on the information given, the goals expressed, and the decisions reached, in the first interview." She told the students that, like all healthy people, they must anticipate becoming health care clients at some point in their lives. This means, said Graham, "being prepared to offer information, expecting to ask questions as well as answer them, knowing your rights, and understanding how the system works." She added, "It is your right — it is not your privilege — to have health care."

Course evaluations indicate that the students were very impressed by the alumni visitors and learned a great deal from their "real-world" perspective. Badami says, "As we reflected on the course in our last session and acknowledged the inspiration which these alumni brought us, one current master's degree student announced her new goal: 'To be invited back as a guest speaker soon after graduation!'"

Phyllis C. Michael '28, who has been writing poems of hope and faith for 40 years, recently published "Bright Tomorrows," her seventh book that contains more than 40 poems dealing with emotions, including hope, trust, faith and pain.

In endorsing Bright Tomorrows, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale wrote: "I have found interest, comfort, and inspiration in the poetry of Phyllis C. Michael. Her poetry is especially good for the down period, the discouraging days. But she also has an extraordinary appreciation of the beauty, often unseen, which lies around us all. Her poetry has a lifting quality."

Her many credits, aside from recognition in Who's Who in America, include first place in the National Favorite Hymns contest in 1953 for "Take Thou My Hand," and a Certificate of Merit for distinguished service to composition of outstanding hymns in 1967.

Twelve of her prayer-poems are included on the calendar pages of Daily Guideposts 1989, a collection of inspirational daily readings.

After graduating from Bloomsburg, she later earned a bachelor's degree in music at the Extension Conservatory in Chicago. A former teacher, she spent five years at the Fairview Avenue School in Berwick and later taught elementary and high school classes at Northwest Area School District. She retired from teaching in 1971.

She and her husband, Anlim, have been married 55 years. They are the parents of two sons, Robert and Keith.

Virginia E. Cruikshank '30 was featured in a recent article in the Sunbury Daily Item, written by Valerie Bailey:

Poetry is Virginia E. Cruikshank's way of expressing thoughts and ideas.

Miss Cruikshank, a retired school teacher who recently celebrated her 80th birthday, has been writing poetry for more than 50 years.

Although she considers poetry as only a life-long hobby, Miss Cruikshank's poems have won her numerous amateur poet awards. Several of her poems have been printed in poetry volumes such as The American Poetry Anthology, published by the American Poetry Association, Love's Greatest Treasures Today's Poets Speak from the Heart, and Editor's Choice: A Selection of John Frost's Favorite Poets, both edited by John Frost.

Miss Cruikshank said she started writing poetry during her junior year at Shamokin High School, about the time of the Depression.

For a class assignment, she wrote a poem entitled, "Music Lesson Day," which was later published in the Philadelphia Record. Despite her immediate success, Miss Cruikshank said she didn't resume writing poetry until the late 1940s.

Meanwhile, she finished high school and attended Bloomsburg State College and received a normal (two-year) teaching diploma. After graduation, she worked in a small school. Later, she finished her undergraduate work at Bloomsburg and earned a master's degree from Middlebury College in Vermont by attending classes during the summer.

After college (about 1948), Miss Cruikshank wrote a few more poems, some of which were published in the Lantern, a poetry magazine in New York City.

She had more poems printed in the 1950s. Miss Cruikshank won first place in poetry contests held in 1953, 1955 and 1978 at the Chautauque Institution in Chautauque, N.Y., where she was attending a music camp. She was selected for the Golden Poet Award, a competition among amateur poets, five consecutive years.

Miss Cruikshank taught elementary school for 41 years, first in Shamokin and then in Sunbury. She said she didn't have much time to write poetry while she was teaching school. But in 1979, she started writing again after being asked to write a few poems using teaching as a theme.

She said she writes about things she thinks about or observes.

"I get to thinking about it and start to write," she added. "I like words and rhythm." Miss Cruikshank said she has written her poems mostly in free-verse.

Miss Cruikshank said she draws inspiration for her poems from her father (who died in 1978) and her mother, a 103-year-old resident in the extended care ward of the Sunbury Community Hospital.

She has written many poems about both of them. She said she wrote the first poem about her mother at her request.

When her mother reached 100 years old, Miss Cruikshank celebrated the event by writing a poem. Her latest poem about her mother marked Mrs. Cruikshank's 103rd birthday, which included a few lines about Today Show's Willard Scott wishing her a happy birthday on national television.

A music lover, Miss Cruikshank often writes poems about music such as "For the Love of Music," and "The Singer." Other themes have been God, history and her garden.

Her memberships in the Business and Professional Women's Club, American Association of Retired Persons, the Senior Action Center, Eastern Star, and St. John's United Methodist Church have served as sources of inspiration, she said.

Helping at the Sunbury Community Hospital inspired her to write the poem, "Nursing Home Volunteer."

Sometimes the poems are written in a short time, while other times they take a bit longer, she said. Usually, a first draft is written. Then she polishes it.

"Poetry is an art form different from prose. You have to blend style and content in a different way," she said. Miss Cruikshank's advice for anyone who wants to write poetry is to read as much poetry as they can.

Although she is not working on a poem at this time, Miss Cruikshank said she does not plan ahead to write poetry. Something inspires her, then she writes a poem, when she has time.

(Editor's Note: Miss Cruikshank was recently named Golden Poet for 1989 by World of Poetry, Sacramento, California. The annual award is in recognition of her poem, "To My Mother on Approaching Her 103rd Birthday," to be published in a forthcoming poetry anthology. She has also been named a Poet of Merit for 1989 by the American Poetry Association of Santa Cruz, California.)

She is a member of the Pennsylvania and the National Federation of State Poetry Societies.)

The following message was written by John F. Magill '48, Ed.D.: We entered BSU in September 1941 as lowly frosh, to the tune of "I Don't Want to Set the World on Fire," little knowing that on December 7 of that same year, the world would be set on fire. I'll never forget Dr. Kuster's class on Monday, December 8, when, as a World War I veteran, he broke down — knowing full well that many of his students would be going to war and some would not come back.

You remember how "The Winds of War" swept through the campus and left it half-deserted. You remember the handsome, friendly face of Donny Jenkins, the upperclassman runner, who might well have run in the 1948 Olympics, but he died in his flaming B-24 bomber over the Ploesti Oil Fields.

We cannot put one sacrifice above another, for there were 27 graduates and students from Bloomsburg who made the ultimate sacrifice for freedom and peace and never returned to Bloomsburg, to love, to friendship and to family. It is simply our intent to remind you of those youthful faces that we all knew and to memorialize their contribution to peace by giving to the Veterans Memorial Fund.

The following message was written by John F. Magill Jr. '48, Ed.D.: Most of the boys who entered Bloomsburg in the fall of 1941 did not graduate until 1948. We were the fortunate ones who made it back from the giant holocaust of World War II. Many came back scarred physically and emotionally, but we did come back, adjusting slowly and steadily to the quiet and security of Bloomsburg.

All the boys in the Class of 1948 and most of the girls in the Class of 1945 remember the shy, friendly face of Allen McCracken. He was killed in action in Europe. Lud (Mildard Ludwig) and I were chosen to represent the class when his body was disinterred from its European resting place and buried with military honors in the National Cemetery in Gettysburg.

We heard the military chaplain speak the comforting words from the 23rd Psalm; we heard the heart-rending sobs of a bereaved family whose son was finally "back home"; we heard the purest and most poignant of all salutes, "Taps," bring the ceremony to a close.

As we turned to leave, Lud and I knew that somehow, someday, Allen and the 26 other Bloomsburg graduates and students would be remembered and honored for the ultimate sacrifice they had made for peace and freedom.

We, the living from the Class of 1948, should be honored that we can give from our material benefits to perpetuate the memory of those who "gave it all."

BLOOMSBURG UNIVERSITY
A Legacy of Learning • 1839-1989

The campus in 1913

Seemingly every week one notices changes for the better in the physical appearance of Bloomsburg University. A new sidewalk, fresh plantings at several locations, and a renovated and brightened interior figure in this development. Considerable physical change has been the norm at Bloomsburg at least in recent decades and some change had taken place occasionally over a long period of time.

This, of course, means that we had a very different campus years ago. A 1913 map shows that a working campus of nineteen acres for Bloomsburg State Normal School was bounded by Light Street Road, Penn Street, East Second Street, and Spruce Street.

That placed the athletic field, frequently referred to as Mount Olympus, in an area now occupied by Navy Hall, Columbia Hall, Northumberland Hall, and part of Haas Center.

Adjacent to the athletic field was what was called the Grove in a space now taken up by Montour Hall. There was an attempt at one time to have an example of every bush and tree native to Pennsylvania planted here. A run or small stream coursed its way through the grove near its southern boundary.

Science Hall and Carver Hall, then called Institute Hall, were the only two buildings in 1913 now a part of our present campus. Old North Dormitory, a men's dorm, stood where the present much larger Luzerne Hall is. Just south of it were four tennis courts bounded in part by East Second Street.

Behind Institute Hall and connected to it by an enclosed walkway was the Model School Building later called Nocting Hall, a three story building containing twenty-eight rooms, many used by Bloomsburg State Normal School students for practice teaching.

Here many town children received elementary education. Behind the model School and connected to the main dormitory, later called Waller Hall, was the Gymnasium. The 1913-14 catalog boasted that it was "fitted up with the best apparatus made...and from the first took its place among the best gymnasiums in America."

The Main Dormitory was a four story building with a main portion and an added wing. A long porch of 140 feet extended across the front of this building "and from it, may be obtained one of the grandest views in eastern Pennsylvania."

This building, demolished in 1974, was in the area where Lyscoming Hall now stands. Any view from this vantage point now is obliterated by Elwell Hall. The Main Dormitory was more than a dormitory as it also housed the dining room, kitchen, classrooms, and the library.

Two last buildings shown on the 1913 map and located approximately where the maintenance building and part of Northumberland Hall is now were two labeled barn and zoo. The barn was probably left over from the time when much of the food for the dining hall was grown and raised on campus. At this writing we can only guess that the zoo was where some zoology animals were kept. Buckalew Place, although existing at this time, was not yet owned by the school.

In addition to the campus grounds being much smaller, and the buildings being architecturally of their time, the major difference in 1913 was the greater spacious feeling and the noticeable woody area of the Grove. The spacious feeling is, alas, gone forever, but with current and future plantings growing every year, someday the campus will regain a considerable measure of greenery that long ago enhanced this campus.

Dianne Basala Berlin '62 was recently awarded a Public Education Partners and Promoters Award by the Manheim Central Educators Association for her work with The Chemical People Movement, an anti-drug movement. She has also been awarded two Governor's Parents as Partners Awards.

As a leader in the parents' anti-drug movement, she was invited to the White House Conferences for a Drug-Free America. For her suggestions, she was recognized with a Certificate of Outstanding Contribution.

In June, she submitted testimony to the Governor's Pennsylvania Drug Free Community Initiative (PENNFREE).

She writes: "Even though I haven't been in the PAID work force for a number of years, I have been busy in trying to improve things for our future generations. . . . In many ways, these awards which were given to me also help to recognize the efforts by other parent volunteers."

William Kuhns '62 was featured in an article in the Lansdale Reporter, written by Kristen B. Frasch. Excerpts follow:

In 1963, William Kuhns got so flustered at the incompetence of two different tax preparers who botched his forms that he decided to venture into the business himself.

A Centennial School District elementary teacher at the time, Kuhns started spending his spare time at his Haufield Township home pouring over his forms and those of his friends.

Today, with an office in Lansdale's Century Plaza and provisions made for taking customers by appointment at his Bramble Gate Drive home, Kuhns serves more than 300 customers.

He also works full-time as the director of student teaching at Cabrini College in Radnor.

"I keep busy," said the 49-year-old husband, father of two and grandfather of one.

Kuhns prides himself on running a "homey" business, no matter how big it gets. The fact that so many people know him helps. Many of his clients remember his grandfather, Edwin Kuhns, who owned and ran the former Kuhns Drug Store on Main Street in Lansdale.

His grandson often helps him by chewing the forms he discards in his trash can, he said, laughing. His cocker spaniel, Hickles, loves it when people visit the house.

"He sits on their feet and warms them while they wait for me to finish their forms."

One elderly woman from Philadelphia trusts him enough to ride the train to Lansdale every year before tax time just so he can pick her up at the station and drive her to his house to prepare her forms.

"When I'm done, I drive her back to Lansdale, and we say goodbye until next year. We're friends."

Donald Hopkins '64, a teacher at Dallas High School, was one of two teachers recognized by the Dallas Post in conjunction with National Teachers Day on May 9. The following article was written by Chailot M. Denmon of the Post staff:

Donald Hopkins, a native of Dallas, has been an English teacher at Dallas High School since 1964. A graduate of Westmoreland High School, he graduated from Bloomsburg University with a B.S. degree in English. He also received his master's degree in theatre and speech at Bloomsburg.

In addition to teaching English, Hopkins, who is English Department chairman, also teaches an advanced placement English course, and with mathematics instructor Edward Augustine teaches a variety of courses to fit the needs of students best.

"We now teach courses we never had in the past," Hopkins said. "Students are exposed to subjects they will take when they enter college. We have established our own courses of study, and all teachers work together in establishing the courses to be taught."

Don Hopkins has also been director of high school stage productions since his second year at Dallas. Years ago, he got away from the regular class plays and focused on educational theater programs, providing a variety from light comedy to tragedy to musicals to Shakespeare.

Hopkins said he gets upset when the public feels students can't handle Greek drama, Shakespeare and comedy.

"Our students without any experience did an excellent job with 'A Comedy of Errors.' They did the scenery, the technical work and the costumes. We don't rent sets nor the costumes. The students do the lighting, sound, and we have a stage manager in charge of the entire production. The results are educational and professional," Hopkins explained.

It's an enriching experience for the students from the time the drama is selected until the last curtain goes down each year. When it's a musical presentation, the drama group also works with the musical and choral director. It takes six to nine weeks to prepare the show. Hopkins makes the final decision about the presentation and shares it with the students who have had past experience.

He said the students need to be able to read a play and stage it.

Dallas High School has been blessed by a number of students who have gone on in national touring companies, to Broadway and to teaching theatre in colleges, all of which gives Hopkins great satisfaction.

"We try to provide a program that doesn't restrict since our purpose is a well-rounded education. We have two productions annually, and we try to have a variety, one lighter than the other," Hopkins explained. During the Easter vacation, the students work with him on the drama every day."

Hopkins has found that an average eight to nine week schedule of rehearsing lets the students peak at the right time. In addition to work as a drama director, Hopkins teaches an average of five classes daily.

Hopkins' wife, the former Mary Ann Foley, started teaching at Dallas the same year that he did, but now teaches English at Wyoming Seminary. They have one son, Donald, who is now a student at Penn State University in the scholars program.

His teaching and extra-curricular work as drama director does not allow many hours at home so many times Hopkins' wife brings dinner to school so they can dine together. Mary Ann critiques the production during the final week of rehearsal. Hopkins has spent 23 years doing two productions annually, and for a few years he had a summer program for children.

Overall, he believes Dallas has been blessed with a good staff. Last year during the summer, Hopkins performed in College Misconduct's Theatre on the Green and found it refreshing. He was impressed with the professionalism of the group. If the situation presents itself, Hopkins said he may do it again. Each summer he and his wife take a group of students to England.

A past president of the Dallas Education Association, he helped initiate the staff development program.

"I like what I'm doing, that's why I keep doing it," Hopkins said. "It's gratifying to know you have played a part in your students' success."

Barry O. Smith '64 who resigned as superintendent of the Mid-West School District in July, has been hired as an associate professor in the Department of Education, Administration and Foundations at Shippensburg University.

Betsy Strunk '64 is one of a team of instructors teaching Performance Learning Systems courses to teachers statewide. The PLS courses of Wilkes College, developed from a research foundation, are designed to improve teaching skills and techniques.

A resource room specialist and teacher consultant in the Media Elementary School, she teaches kindergarten through fifth grade students with learning disabilities or social/emotional disturbances.

She earned a master's degree in elementary education at West Chester University and a special education certificate at Penn State University.

She and her husband, Robert, are the parents of two sons: Robert and Geoffrey.

Arthur Hakim '67, an instructor in the Wilkes-Barre Area School District, has had recent works on exhibit in three different cities in California. His original creative design for a Valentine's Day card was shown in Oakland; the photo collage, "The Death Assassin," was displayed in Fresno; and his piece entitled "Unidentified Flying Objects," was on exhibit in Venice.

An acrylic painting, "Snowbound," a watercolor, "Fall is Here," and a pencil drawing of his daughter, "Kelly's Pride and Joy," were on exhibit in the Wyoming Valley Art League's exhibition of recent works in Kingston.

Along with teaching art education and studio courses at Plains Junior High School, he has served as athletic director since 1976.

William Brueck, principal, noted: "I am proud to state that his art work decorates the walls of the administrative offices at Plains Junior High School. I am most pleased with the personal concern he shows for his students. We in the Wilkes-Barre Area School District believe Arthur Hakim is a great spokesman for Bloomsburg University."

Hakim earned a master's degree in studio art at Marywood College.

Barry E. Scheetz '67, senior research associate of the materials research laboratory and associate professor of solid state science at Penn State, spent April lecturing and consulting at the Tongji University in Shanghai. Dr. Scheetz visited China as a consultant for the International Advisory Panel of the Chinese University Development Project, an organization sponsored by the World Bank and administered by the National Academy of Sciences.

The purpose of Dr. Scheetz's visit was to review both the science and engineering curriculum of the Research and Analysis Centre of Tongji University and to make recommendations for improvements in these programs. In addition, he gave 12 three-hour lectures to the faculty of the University on topics relating to the characterization and development of cements and concretes.

This consulting program aims to align the educational programs in major Chinese universities with those of the western world. While in Shanghai, Dr. Scheetz met with representatives from other universities and industries.

Wayne F. Heim '69 has been named principal of the Conestoga Valley Junior High School. For the past two years he was assistant principal at the senior high school.

Bruce Hopkins '69 was the recipient of two awards given by the Manhattan Association of Cabaret at the Third Annual Gala Awards Ceremony held at the Village Gate in New York City. He won in the category of outstanding director and outstanding written material. He was also nominated in the category of outstanding musical comedy performer.

This is the third year in a row that Hopkins has won the directors award. The association is composed of cabaret artists, booking managers and club owners, all of whom vote for nominees in 24 different categories.

A native of Dallas, Pa., Hopkins has been performing, directing and writing cabaret shows in New York for the past 10 years. For many years he was the booking manager for two of Manhattan's most popular clubs, the Duplex and Don't Tell Mama, and has been associated with almost 200 cabaret shows and revues in the 1980s.

Currently (April), Hopkins is performing with the internationally acclaimed La Gran Scene Opera Company at the Ballroom, a cabaret-theater in the Chelsea section of Manhattan, and also appears on Sunday evenings at the Duplex in Greenwich Village in a satirical revue entitled, "Dog Eat Dog: an Eastern City Country Western Type Doodad," which he directed.

With La Gran Scene, an all-male comedy opera troupe, he performs the role of Sylvia Bells, "America's most beloved retired diva." The troupe performed earlier this year in Berlin and London, and recently returned to New York from a highly successful week at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

While in Europe, he also toured with his own one-man show, "Conversations At Our Lady of the Harbor Bar and Grill," performing in London, Amsterdam, and Cologne. The Kolner Stadtanzeiger, Cologne's largest daily newspaper, described the show as "a perfect evening of entertainment."

Shirley Logan '75 and William Kozerski celebrated their 33rd wedding anniversary in April. Shirley is employed by Wilkes-Barre Area School District. William is employed at the Sunday Independent and is also the owner of William Kozerski Real Estate in Plains. The couple have six children and six grandchildren.

Melissa McGhee '75, a teacher of hearing-impaired students at Port Allegheny Elementary School, has been chosen for Intermediate Unit 9's Annie Sullivan Award. Named for the famous teacher of Helen Keller, the award recognizes a special education teacher who has been unusually successful in having handicapped students accepted in the school and community. To be chosen for this award, a teacher must be nominated by his or her peers, compete with other nominees, and be selected by a review committee.

According to fellow teachers, by having special needs children interact with other children in the school, McGhee has encouraged students and teachers to view them as "children with handicapping conditions" rather than "handicapped children" and to recognize their talents rather than their problems.

McGhee has helped teachers and hearing children in the school to understand the nature of hearing losses and what needs to be done to make the hearing impaired child an active member of the school.

She has taught hearing children signing and finger-spelling and other means to communicate with the hearing impaired. She has also had her students involved in school activities, even to the extent of having them perform in assembly programs.

McGhee has instilled her students with a healthy sense of humor, a quality which they need to reduce the stress which they experience. She has accepted invitations to regular classrooms to explain the difficulties experienced by the hearing impaired and the technical devices which they use to overcome their difficulties. She is a role model for her students, and through her encouragement, they consider themselves important and capable.

Danny W. Neltz '75 graduated from the Pennsylvania College of Podiatric Medicine on May 27. He was awarded the Philadelphia Podiatric Society Award and was a member of the Gold Key Society, International Honor Service Fraternity. He also served as class president and as vice president of the Student Council. He formerly taught eighth grade physical science in Pottstown for 10 years.

He and his wife, the former Barbara Benzon, are the parents of a son, Andrew. They reside in Willow Grove.

(Editor's Note: The following article by Joseph Cocco was printed in the Asbury Park Press, under the headline "Former poor kid from Lakewood deals with the giants.")

If window views in Manhattan are a barometer of success, Matti A. Prima's mid-town office could well be his testimonial — 47 floors up on Park Avenue with panorama of the river and the pulsating commerce below.

"Not bad for a poor kid from Lakewood," says Prima, a man clearly proud of his roots and career achievements.

Prima, 34, is a high-finance deal-maker. His job is to bring together buyers and sellers of communication companies. That often means day-to-day dealings with media moguls and well-heeled investors with the financial clout to access hundreds of millions of dollars.

For Prima, the father of three, this world of money and media barons couldn't be farther from the economic class from which he emerged. The son of Estonian parents, Prima says he didn't begin to speak English until starting kindergarten in Lakewood, where he spent his younger years living in a modest apartment.

Prima says a drive to succeed was instilled in him at a young age by his father, Ulo Prima, who worked in construction by day and studied at night, eventually becoming an engineer for IBM. Matti Prima also had uncles and other relatives who provided the financial and moral support needed for the son of immigrants to earn a master's degree in business administration and then succeed in the financial thickets of New York City.

"We were really a nuclear family," Prima says. "If someone needed a dollar, they would go to an uncle."

During summer, holidays and vacations, Prima worked at an uncle's construction company to earn school money. He went to good colleges, but hardly the celebrated Ivy League institutions that serve as a rite of passage to jobs on Wall Street and high-powered financial centers throughout the world. (Editor's Note: Bloomsburg State College was mentioned in a profile which accompanied the article, along with Pepperdine University, where Matti earned an MBA degree.)

Still, with a little help from family friends, Prima gained entry. He became a leveraged-buyout specialist in the banking industry. Prima says his forte was technical side of the complex, heavily debt-financed purchases. He learned to assess a company's worth and help structure purchase plans that made the deals possible, but without the crippling balance sheets.

Prima calls this being honest — a key ingredient to success.

"If you have some smarts, guts and you're basically honest, you can make it," Prima believes. "It's not always the guys who have the resources handed to them who succeed; it's those who take the resources they have and make them work for them."

Key to many of the leveraged buyout deals engineered by Prima is a company's cash flow. Basically, businesses with a lot of incoming cash and low fixed costs make attractive takeover targets.

As a group, newspapers often fall into this category. So it was only a matter of time before Prima found himself piecing together major newspaper deals.

Among his first was the $200 million sale of a newspaper property in Jacksonville, Fla. Then came a $75 million deal involving the sale of an Indianapolis television station. Success bred success.

Prima joined the then-upstart investment banking firm of Henry Ansbacher Inc. five years ago to become one of three managing directors. The firm specializes in communication company mergers and acquisitions.

Prima says he helped structure between 30 and 35 media deals a year through the company. He has worked with the heads of some of the biggest newspapers and media chains, as well as lesser-known independents.

Ingersoll Publications Co. of Princeton is among his clients. Prima was a consultant on the company's $150 million-plus purchase of the Daily Record of Morris County in 1987, and weekly newspapers there as well.

He has also worked with the Newhouse family, which owns the state's largest-circulation newspaper, the Star-Ledger in Newark, Prima says.

"Five years ago, I couldn't get a telephone call returned," says Prima. "Now I can call people like Donald Newhouse at home on weekends, and they take my call immediately."

Prima says he is a good numbers man. But it takes more than analytical ability to juggle successfully the interests of power brokers.

"It's the human element," says Prima.

Prima wants to take his people- and money-skills and apply them in New Jersey. He recently purchased a home in Mercer County, where he soon plans to move his family. His goal is to gain enough financial independence to enter state politics.

Says Prima: "I've been interested in politics since I was six years old."

YEARBOOK DILEMMA: For some inexplicable reason, not everyone in the Class of 1985 received a yearbook. Nor are there any yearbooks left over. We're trying to provide a happy ending for those class members who didn't get their yearbooks. If you received a 1985 yearbook by mistake, or if you received two copies, please contact the Alumni Office. Or if you are a two-yearbook family, would you consider donating one of them to a classmate who doesn't have one? Thanks.

Say cheese!

For many alumni, Bloomsburg has been a family affair. They are proud to note that parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts and cousins have all shared the Bloomsburg experience.

Well, now is the time to show off your BU family. When the family converges this spring and summer for commencements, weddings and reunions, get all your BU alumni together for a photo. And pull in the relatives by marriage, too!

For best results, take the photo outdoors and use 35mm film. Color or black and white photos are acceptable. Be sure to identify everyone in the photo with complete name and graduation year.

Prizes will be awarded to the largest families, as well as other categories. All photos will be published in a special Sesquicentennial issue of The Alumni Quarterly this fall.

Please send your photo to the Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. Deadline for photos is September 15, 1989.

Global Change and Our Endangered Environment From Planet Earth to Pennsylvania

A Symposium on Global and Local Environmental Issues

Hosted by Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania

October 17 and 18, 1989

Mitrani Hall, Haas Center for the Performing Arts

Global changes are affecting our natural environment. Humans destroy massive amounts of forested lands each year, the lands and seas are being fouled with waste from a throwaway society, and the greenhouse effect caused by excess carbon dioxide emissions and other gases could create a climatic calamity. In Pennsylvania, citizens of the Commonwealth face challenges brought about by overflowing landfills, acid rain, and unsafe natural water supplies. What are the causes of these problems, what can be done to solve them, and what are our responsibilities? Join educators, students, businesspeople, political leaders, scientists, and policy-makers as we explore these issues October 17 and 18 at Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania.

To register for the entire symposium or any part of it, please check which sessions you would like to attend and fill in and return the form at the bottom of this page.

October 17

☐ 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A national video teleconference, Global Change and Our Endangered Environment, originating from Bloomsburg University

☐ 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

How Global Changes Affect Pennsylvania and Vice Versa, an evening discussion with former astronaut M. Scott Carpenter, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources Secretary Arthur Davis, and Regional EPA Administrator Edwin B. Erickson

☐ 9 a.m. to noon

A panel of experts discusses Environmental Dimensions of Energy Policies (acid rain, nuclear waste, coal mining practices, and other energy issues) affecting Pennsylvania

☐ 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A panel of experts discusses Waste and Management and Water Quality problems and solutions in Pennsylvania

☐ 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

What Can Education Do to Help? Speakers discuss environmental issues from an Earth systems science perspective; education's response to the need to educate students of all ages about environmental responsibility; and is society ready to do what is necessary to save the environment?

The Bloomsburg University Store would like to promote the University through a picture board which will be located in the lobby of the store. The board will consist of photos of students, faculty members, staff, family or friends shown with some item or article of clothing with "Bloomsburg University" on it. The article need not be purchased in the University Store.

"Bloomsburg University Community Around the World" will also feature symbols, flags, foods, holidays, etc. of the states and countries in the photographs. A large map will indicate the states and countries in the photos.

The display will remain in the lobby for a period of time so everyone will have an opportunity to view it to see if they recognize the people, states and countries in the photos. Rotation of photos will depend on the number received.

As an introductory offer, we will send a free T-shirt to you upon receipt of your photo. This offer is for photos from every country and state, excluding Pennsylvania, which are sent before December 31, 1989. In the spring of 1990, a first prize of $100 will be awarded to the most unique photo. A random drawing of all photos submitted will be used to award a $75 second prize and a $50 third prize.

We need your help to make this project successful! If you have a photo, or if you are planning a trip in the near future, please send us your photo with your name and address on the back. Also indicate your T-shirt size. Photos will be returned in about one year.

Please send photos to June Ebnright, The University Store, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. If you have any questions, please call 717-389-4175.

Birthday celebration sets stage for more challenges

Paging through the 1989 "Sesquicentennial Calendar," past the photographs that were once taken to capture then special moments, I came to a list of Sesquicentennial events. On first glance, the events appeared to be the usual kinds of things that take place during any year in the life of a university — lectures, musical and dramatic productions, athletic contests, and art shows; commencements, dedications, convocations, and celebrations. With events that are, in some respects, typical, what made our Sesquicentennial celebration special? What worth and value has been gained from our observance?

AUSPRICH

In one respect, the Sesquicentennial events helped some people see Bloomsburg University in a new light. The media responded positively, producing story after story about Bloomsburg University and our 150th anniversary. Through the media, Bloomsburg University was brought to the attention of thousands of people, and that increased attention brought greater recognition to our university.

While the external world sees Bloomsburg in a new and brighter light, internally the events of the Sesquicentennial have stirred our hearts and minds. The events have created an opportunity to be together — alumni, faculty and staff, students and friends — to share in the excitement and happiness of special occasions. In the best sense, this Sesquicentennial was a family celebration. We enjoyed the pleasures of good art, good music, good drama, and good conversations with the best of company. We learned more about the history of our university and have come to understand our heritage and community better. We've studied together, addressed issues critical to our future, and shared the enjoyment of our birthday celebration.

As I look again at the photographs in my calendar, I form a snapshot in my mind of what might appear in another calendar, in another year — a photograph from the Sesquicentennial. I think it might be a photograph from the environmental symposium, and the caption would read, "Environmental Symposium, 1989 — The proceedings of the symposium were transmitted via satellite, the advanced communication technology of the day, to sites throughout the nation. Participants grappled with environmental concerns and became the catalyst for the life-saving environmental reform that changed our world."

Because of all I have experienced, seen, and heard during our year-long Sesquicentennial celebration, I look forward with excitement and wonder to 1990 and beyond. Fresh and unique opportunities await us, and I hope you will share my enthusiasm as we reach out to embrace the challenges and changes of the future.

Reflections

BY MARY ANNE KLEMKOSKY '59
President, BU Alumni Association

In reflection, the past year has been one of growth and progress for the Alumni Association. We continue striving to provide you with quality service and programming from on-campus, in-house activities to chapter meetings. Most recently, Homecoming Weekend was highlighted with the dedication of the Veterans' Memorial Garden on the front lawn of the Fenstermaker Alumni House. Eight trees were planted near the Alumni House in conjunction with the planting of 150 trees on campus to celebrate the Sesquicentennial of the University. Numerous contacts were made with alumni during the past year!

To serve you better and keep communications flowing, we now have an "800" toll-free number for your calling convenience. Just call Alumni Director Doug or our secretarial staff, Linda and Jackie, at 1-800-526-0254.

By the time you are reading this message, our fax machine should be on order. Both the 800-number and the fax machine will make it easy for you to communicate your change of status, personal news, address changes, and whatever you wish to share with us. We are open to your suggestions for chapter meetings or other types of activities that will bring alumni together in your locale.

Looking to the future, this will be the fourth year for our Stratford trip which has become increasingly popular each year. Already there are a number of individuals who have reserved their seats for the trip scheduled for August 13 through August 18, 1990. Participants will have the opportunity to see as many as six shows. If you want a week of camaraderie and enjoyment at a price that's a real bargain, then mark your calendars and get in touch with the Alumni Office.

Alumni Weekend in 1990 is scheduled for April 27, 28 and 29. In addition to the traditional activities, we will be conducting a seminar on the Soviet Union, presented by our own faculty and staff. Those of you who attended the seminar on China in 1988 can recall the quality sessions that were arranged. Our Soviet seminar is sure to whet your interest and meet your expectations!

Homecoming Weekend is scheduled for October 26, 27 and 28, 1990. Though we have recently celebrated this event, we are already in the planning stages for next year!

Be sure to be an active alum! Add the above dates to your calendar! And give us a call to tell us what types of events you would like to attend!

Campaign tops first goal

Bloomsburg University has exceeded $1 million in gifts and pledges toward the first phase of its "Trust for Generations" development campaign.

"The first phase of the campaign, The Library Fund, has raised nearly $1.1 ($1.06) million in gifts and pledges," said Anthony Ianiero, assistant vice president for development. "Because of the attrition factor which sometimes occurs with pledges, we will continue to raise additional donations for phase one."

According to Ianiero, BU initially received a $250,000 contribution toward The Library Fund from its students as a challenge to parents, alumni, local businesses and friends of the institution. Since the beginning of the campaign earlier this fall, the university has received an additional $166,000 from parents and the remainder from former BU students, businesses and friends, he said.

Ianiero said the "Trust for Generations" campaign has been designed in three phases—The Library Fund, The Scholarship Fund and The Academic Excellence Fund—to produce financial assistance for the university's primary needs.

"We will be wrapping up phase one sometime during the upcoming spring semester and begin to concentrate on phase two," Ianiero said.

Susan Helwig, associate director of development, said the university has also received significant contributions toward the second and third phases of the fundraising drive.

"As of Dec. 8, the university has received $774,000 in gifts and pledges toward our $1 million goal for phase two, The Scholarship Fund," Helwig said. "We have also raised almost $600,000 toward our goal of $1.5 million for phase three, The Academic Excellence Fund."

The five-year, $3.5 million development campaign is the largest private financial undertaking by BU in its 150 years of existence. Initiated by the BU Foundation, the "Trust for Generations" is a means for providing additional funding to enhance and maintain the university's quality academic programs.

The official announcement to kick off the fundraising drive was delivered by BU President Harry Ausprich at an evening ceremony during the university's 1989 Homecoming festivities, Oct. 28.

Walker among SSHE planners

Preparing for the 1990s and the 21st century, Pennsylvania's State System of Higher Education has named a planning commission to develop distinctive and realistic goals for adapting the educational programs of the 14 state-owned universities to future needs, challenges, and opportunities in the Commonwealth and the nation.

"The State System of Higher Education is beginning its seventh year of existence," Board Chair F. Eugene Dixon, Jr. said. "This critical phase in our System's evolution calls for a comprehensive and integrated strategic plan."

"The commission's effort should position the System to offer the kind of higher education opportunities that tomorrow's citizens will need for life in the 21st century," he said.

The 14-member planning commission, representing top leadership within the State System's academic community, includes John L. Walker, Vice President for Institutional Advancement at BU. State System Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Emily Hannah is the chair of the commission.

"The commission representatives were selected for their ability to address complex issues objectively, rationally, and creatively," Dr. Hannah said. "These are people who can work collegially for the good of all."

The planning commission is expected to complete its assignment and present its recommendations to the chancellor before consideration by the Board of Governors in July, 1990.

Magee recipient of BU medallion

James A. Magee, president of Magee Industrial Enterprises, Inc., of Bloomsburg, was recognized as the seventh University Medallion at BU's December Commencement Convocation.

He was awarded the medallion in commemoration of his community leadership, his devotion to the Town of Bloomsburg, and his support of University initiatives.

The University Medallion, designed and sculpted by Richard E. Bonham of Catawissa, is a cast pewter replica of the bronze university seal medallion worn by BU's president during academic convocations. It is circular in form and symbolizes the bringing together of a special group of people mutually interested in BU's mission.

"Jim Magee and his family have provided many opportunities for a better life to the people of Bloomsburg," said BU President Harry Ausprich. "He has been supportive of countless town and university projects over the years, and Bloomsburg University is pleased to bestow upon him our seventh University Medallion."

Magee, a native and resident of Bloomsburg since birth, has been associated with the Magee Carpet Co. and Magee Industrial Enterprises, Inc., since 1950. He is a trustee of the Magee Foundation and president and director of the Magee Christian Education Foundation. He also serves as director of the Bloomsburg Bank-Columbia Trust Co., is a member of the BAIDA board of directors, and is a past director of the Carpet and Rug Institute.

Always active in community organizations, Magee serves as a member of the executive committee of Boy Scouts of America and was president of the Bloomsburg Hospital and vice president and director of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce. He is a past president of the Bloomsburg Rotary Club and a former trustee of Wesley United Methodist Church.

A graduate of Bloomsburg High School, Magee attended Gettysburg College and the Philadelphia College of Textile and Science. He served in the U.S. Army from 1952 to 1954 and in the Army Reserves from 1954 to 1956.

Magee and his wife, Audrey, have three children — Drue (Hummel) and James, both of Bloomsburg, and Elizabeth of Phoenix, Arizona. They also have four grandchildren.

BU alumni attend SSHE event

In October the State System of Higher Education and the Pennsylvania Council of Alumni Associations sponsored a reception for alumni of the 14 SSHE universities living in Chester and Delaware counties. It was an opportunity for SSHE alumni to show their collective impact on that region and to learn more about the State System.

Representing BU were Michael Alban '88, Scott Cheek '80, Wendy Hamer '86, John Masters '59, Daniel McGrew '51, Gall Manners Yaroch '78 and Joseph Zakorchemny '72.

Former student dies in Florida

John "Jack" Herbert Willson Jr., 26, a student and wrestler at BU for two years earlier in the 1980s, died October 12 after coming in contact with a high voltage wire while working as an electrician. He had been living in Florida since 1984.

He is survived by his parents, two sisters and his fiancée.

Alumnae in leadership roles

Montgomery County, Maryland, has three chapters of Alpha Delta Kappa, an honorary educational sorority for women educators. The presidents of two of the chapters are Bloomsburg alumnae: Mary Malers '35 and Dorothy Landis '62.

Husky Club post filled

J. Andrew Cannon has been named administrative director for athletic development and executive director of the Husky Club. Cannon, who began his term on September 11, fills the position held on an interim basis by Joseph DeMelfi.

"As a member of the university development team, Andy brings to us a variety of experiences that will help expand support of our athletic program," Anthony M. Ianiero, director of development, stated. "In addition, Andy will provide the Husky Club with new ideas and a dynamic spirit."

In his work experience, Cannon has gained extensive knowledge of the inner workings of athletics from a variety of directions. He served as assistant to the director of athletics as a graduate student at the University of Hartford during its move from NCAA Division II into the Division I ranks. Also, Cannon served as general manager of two minor league baseball teams, the Helena Phillies and the Bakersfield Outlaws.

In other positions, Cannon has served as sports director and anchor for KTVG-TV, an NBC affiliate, and as a sports writer for the Independent Record, covering high school and college sports and adding feature stories to local coverage. He also worked for the United States Postal Service while in graduate school.

Cannon earned an MBA with concentrations in marketing, management and athletic administration at the University of Hartford in 1988, and a BA in economics from Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri, in 1973.

Former mayor honored

Daniel J. Bauman, former mayor of Bloomsburg, became the sixth recipient of the University Medallion in recognition of his years of service to the community. The presentation was made during commencement exercises in August.

"Mayor Bauman provided excellent leadership in our community during his two terms in office," said President Harry Ausprich. "His service to Bloomsburg, Columbia County and this university will be remembered and appreciated by local residents for years to come."

MSN accreditation sought

BU is seeking initial accreditation of its master of science in nursing graduate degree program by the National League of Nursing, according to Lauretta Pierce, chairperson of the nursing department.

The NLN, the official accrediting body for nursing programs in the United States, conducted a site visit early in November. This is part of the process for a new nursing program seeking accreditation by the NLN. The NLN board review, the last step of the process, will occur in the spring of 1990.

The undergraduate degree program was accredited by the NLN in 1984, and that status will continue.

Emeritus status granted

Three BU faculty members have been granted faculty emeritus status: John F. Cook Jr., who retired from the art department in May 1989 after 15 years at BU; William L. Jones, who retired from the communication disorders and special education department in December after 25 years; and Donald C. Miller, who retired from the curriculum and foundations department in July after 18 years.

Sculpture garden dedicated

The Percival R. Roberts III Memorial Sculpture Garden, located in the mall area east of Andriess Library, was dedicated on October 1. Roberts was a member of the Art Department from 1968 until his death in 1984.

Widely respected and loved by his students and colleagues, Roberts was an artist, poet, teacher, and friend known for his intense creativity, deep humanity and warm geniality. Roberts' honors included the Litt. D. from L'Libre Universite Asie, the American Poet's Cup Award, and designation as the ninth poet laureate of Delaware. He was named a Commonwealth Teaching Fellow for 1974-1975 in recognition of his exemplary teaching. He won a Commonwealth Service Award in 1976.

Toshiko Takaezu, an internationally known artist, was commissioned in 1987 to sculpt the first piece for the garden, a bronze bell. Takaezu was chosen because of her long personal and professional relationships with the Roberts family and the university.

Three figurative bronze pieces by Minnesota sculptor Michael Price were also placed in the garden. These sculptures were presented to the university by Philip I. and Muriel Berman of Allentown. Art enthusiasts, the Bermans have made many donations of art in their local community. Mrs. Berman is a member of the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education.

"Members of the Art Department have done an outstanding job of realizing their dream of a sculpture garden that will add to the cultural environment of the university," said President Harry Ausprich. "I am sure Professor Roberts would have been very pleased with the concept and touched by the honor. We are grateful to Toshiko Takaezu and Philip and Muriel Berman for helping to make this event possible."

Karl Beamer, associate professor of art and coordinator of the sculpture garden dedication, noted: "The Roberts Sculpture Garden is one way the Art Department is able to provide excellence beyond the classroom. Its contribution to building the university's permanent collection adds diversity to the art avenues — Haas Gallery shows, artists' workshops, and travel studies — available to students."

Tri-Sig gives to fund

Alumnae of Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority held a banquet on August 12 to benefit the Rita M. Guerrieri Memorial Scholarship Fund. The banquet, attended by about 45 alumnae, was held at the Holiday Inn Hotel in King of Prussia.

Rita Guerrieri, Class of 1984, was a Tri-Sigma sister who died in a car accident in 1986. A scholarship fund, administered by the BU Alumni Association, was established by her parents, Arthur and Mary Guerrieri.

A check for $200 for the scholarship fund was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Guerrieri by Kathy Land '84, on behalf of the sorority alumnae, after a speech by Cindy Haas '83. The Guerrieris subsequently matched the gift. The balance in the fund at the end of October was $4,699.

Attending the banquet were Ginger Walgren, Marybeth Wasno, Jeannine Dennison, Judy Geismar, Jennifer Fenimore, Diane Wodrig Donkovich, Kathy Casey Keehn, Patrice Klee, Susie Caponi, Sally

Deagler, Ellen Gonder Carlin, Sue Ganz O'Brien, Chrissy Alberts, Dana Sutton, Molly Wagner Troutman, Jenny Jones-Babyak, Karen Narowski Engel, Elaine Colello, Diane Binder Rohach, Marta Marcelli, Kathy Land, Denise Labecki, Deb Sosenig Gabel, Diane McElhiney, Pamela Norton Jubon, Janice Atkinson, Gwen Sheets, Bev Crawford, Kelli Capparelli, Maureen Boyle, Pam Woodward Weakland, Kathy Savitts, Kim Larson Williams, Nancy Cotton Lansberry, Denise Beard Trites, Joanna McGarry, Cindy Haas, Stacey Talbott, Brenda Wilkins Redshaw, Patty Loughin and A. J. Melvor.

Attending with Mr. and Mrs. Guerrieri was Rita's sister, Maryrose, also a BU graduate.

Plans are being made for other events to benefit the scholarship fund. Anyone wishing to help with future events or not currently on the mailing list is urged to call Jeannine Dennison at 609-729-7561.

Cook funds scholarship

John F. Cook, assistant professor of art and a past director of the Haas Gallery of Art at BU, has donated $15,000 to the university's Foundation to provide scholarships for deserving freshmen art students.

Anthony M. Ianiero, assistant vice president for development, explained that "The John F. Cook Art Student Award will be part of the university's new five-year Trust for Generations campaign." The gift will be invested, with interest income used to provide the scholarships.

"The purpose of the scholarship program is to motivate and support a freshman student majoring in the art studio program," said Stewart Nagel, professor of art and department chairperson.

Scholarships of not less than $500 will be awarded. To be eligible, students must present three representative works of art, a narrative reflecting why the student is deserving of the award, and two letters of recommendation from high school personnel, coupled with a financial aid application. Finalists will be selected and interviewed by art faculty members.

Planned gift honors prof

A $25,000 life insurance policy was recently received by the BU Foundation in honor of William S. O'Bruba, chairperson of the Curriculum and Foundation Department. Hugh Dempsey '70 and Ruey Cloak Dempsey '67 are the donors of this planned gift. Dr. Dempsey's admiration of Dr. O'Bruba during Dempsey's student days at BU prompted the gift.

"We are delighted that the Dempseys have chosen to remember their alma mater in this manner and to honor a member of our faculty," said Anthony M. Ianiero, assistant vice president for development.

O'Bruba noted, "Nice things like this seldom happen to people, and when they do happen, it is sometimes overwhelming. I am very pleased that the Dempseys have chosen to remember me in this fashion. It is a great honor."

Dempsey is president of the Eye and Ear Institute of Pittsburgh. He and Ruey reside in Westmoreland, Pa.

Creasy chairs 'Trust' campaign

James B. Creasy, Class of 1957, is chair of The Trust for Generations, the special campaign designed to generate $3.5 million over the next five years to help secure the university's position as a leader among the state's higher educational institutions and to perpetuate a strong academic program for future students.

The majority of Creasy's 26-year career at BU was spent teaching accounting courses, as well as economics and business law. From 1965 to 1973, he served as assistant to the president and as acting dean of students in 1965. From 1970 to 1973, he served as acting director of continuing education and summer sessions. He retired in 1986.

He earned his MBA degree at Bucknell University in 1960 and his doctorate at Penn State in 1974.

Insurance: A giving alternative

The BU Foundation recently announced its "Million Dollar Club" for deferred giving opportunities. This program will permit new and current donors to have an even greater effect on the university by using life insurance as a charitable giving alternative.

General American Life Insurance Company, A Best's A+ company, was chosen because of its extensive commitment to universities and other non-profit organizations and its ability to provide the Foundation with a life insurance program appropriate for this purpose.

The unique feature of this program enables donors with

Couple chairs annual campaign

John and Jeananne Evans Scrimgeour, Classes of 1953 and 1954, will serve as honorary chairpersons for the 1990 Annual Fund alumni campaign.

The Scrimgeours have been associated with Bloomsburg University since 1959, when John was appointed to the faculty as a teacher of physical science. Since then he has served the university in a number of capacities, including financial aid director and director of placement. Currently he is a member of the counseling center staff. He is also a member of the Alumni Association's Board of Directors. Jeananne has been teaching third grade in the Bloomsburg School District.

Alumni will receive a letter from John and Jeananne in January that explains the continuing need for alumni support. Additional information will review the activities of the Alumni Association in relation to the Bloomsburg University Foundation.

Trees honor Mrs. Mitrani

Milco Industries, Inc., with headquarters located in Bloomsburg, purchased more than 600 trees that were planted on four Israeli university campuses in October as a memorial to the late Louise Mitrani and to commemorate the 150th anniversary of Bloomsburg University.

A manufacturer of lingerie and textiles, Milco donated 150 Ficus Ruhigusel tree saplings to Ben Gurion, Hebrew Technion and Tel Aviv universities in Israel. The trees, purchased with funds made available through the Mitrani Family Foundation, were planted on the grounds of the four universities on October 17, the date BU held its Sesquicentennial anniversary tree-planting ceremony on the school's campus.

"Milco Industries and the Mitrani Family Foundation are proud to honor the late Louise Mitrani with the planting of these trees in Israel," said Norman Belemonte, president of Milco Industries, Inc., and nephew of the late Marco and Louise Mitrani. "We also are pleased to dedicate the trees in commemoration of Bloomsburg University's 150th anniversary this year."

Anthony Ianiero, assistant vice president for development at BU, said Milco Industries, which operates four manufacturing plants at Benton, Berwick, Bloomsburg and Millville, purchased more than 200 additional tree saplings and donated them to BU and the Town of Bloomsburg.

"Milco participated in the tree-planting ceremony on October 17 at Bloomsburg University," said Ianiero. "The corporation purchased a portion of the 150 trees that were planted on campus and gave a gift of 150 trees to the Town of Bloomsburg."

On behalf of the university, BU President Harry Ausprich said, "Bloomsburg University is truly appreciative and forever grateful for the kind donation of trees by Milco Industries and the Mitrani Family Foundation."

"The planting of trees at the four universities in Israel, on the Bloomsburg campus and in the town serves as a memorial to our dear friend, Louise Mitrani, and recognizes Bloomsburg University's Sesquicentennial anniversary. We hope the planting of these trees will forever symbolize her love of learning and support for higher education throughout the United States, Israel and the world."

Congressman speaks to graduates

Congressman Paul E. Kanjorski of Pennsylvania's 11th district delivered the address at BU's December commencement.

"Congressman Kanjorski has proved a true advocate for all of education in Pennsylvania," said BU President Harry Ausprich.

Kanjorski, 52, was first elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1984. Three years ago, he became the first person to be reelected in the 11th district in over a decade.

Husky Club leader shares vision, goals

This column will be an ongoing informational digest authored alternately by Mary Gardner, Bloomsburg University's Director of Athletics and Andy Cannon, Administrative Director of Athletic Development and Executive Director of the Husky Club. The two areas these authors oversee are directly related but have much different focuses. It is hoped that the information supplied in this column will give the readers a sense of what is happening in Husky athletics and in the Husky Club.

This first column outlines the general direction and goals the Husky Club Board of Advisors is planning for the Husky Club. It also describes my vision, as Executive Director, of the operational and organizational aspects of the Husky Club and athletic development. The Board of Advisors' goals for the Husky Club over the next few months and years will be addressed in the first section. The second section will focus on the operational and organizational side of the Husky Club and athletic development.

CANNON

Husky Club Board of Advisors' Goals

1. Increase the base of support by having more people join the Husky Club and by having more businesses assume an active role in sponsoring collegiate athletics. Just as business thrives on team players, athletes learn teamwork and gain confidence in their abilities from athletics. One of the ways to educate future leaders is with a college education combined with participation in collegiate athletics. If the athletic program at Bloomsburg University is to maintain its high ranking in both academics and athletics, more funds must be found for scholarships so the Huskies can continue to attract the brightest and best student-athletes.

2. Maintain the level of support by keeping each gift to the Husky Club at or above the present average level of giving. Because the Husky Club dues are not expected to change in the next couple of years, the giving level should remain relatively constant or possibly rise slightly.

3. Establish new scholarships. One of the best ways to honor former athletes, alumni, coaches, benefactors, and friends is to establish scholarships in their names. Presently, the two best known named scholarships are the Russ Houk Scholarship Fund and the Vernon Rochester Scholarship Fund, although there are others. There are several people in the Bloomsburg University community who are worthy of consideration for an honor of this type. If you have suggestions, please send your ideas and comments to the Board or to me.

4. Increase the number and size of receptions. Over the years the Husky Club has hosted several receptions annually, usually associated with a specific athletic event. Attendance at these receptions has varied. The Husky Club hopes to increase the size of these gatherings substantially and, to a lesser degree, increase their number. These receptions are one way to have fun and to show support for the BU athletes at the same time.

5. Add more special events that will involve more people in the fun and action of Bloomsburg University athletics and the Husky Club. Also, efforts will be made to add a degree of zip and zest to these functions. Past special events have included: the Husky Club Golf Outing, the spring Football Picnic, and the Auction.

6. Make present special and regular events larger, more fun, and more enticing to attend. The larger and more entertaining the event, the better the attendees feel about the university. This will be accomplished by adding some special item, person, or ambience to many events. These additions are expected to promote return attendance at special events and better attendance at regular events and athletic contests.

Husky Club Organizational Goals

1. Enhance organizational aspects of the Husky Club by implementing a preplanned schedule. This means that the major events will be planned farther in advance and be at approximately the same time each year. Although variations may occur because of major university events, these changes should be few in number. Newsletters, membership drives and other activities will be scheduled in the same time period from year to year. This organization will allow the Husky Club to function smoothly and efficiently.

2. Make determining the Husky Club's financial position at any given time easier. To accomplish this, the funds raised will be broken into more clearly defined areas. This will allow for a clear picture of the Husky Club funds at all times.

3. Clarify the focus of the Husky Club. The Husky Club's mission and its focus have become somewhat vague over time. Using the club's articles and by-laws to assist in restating the direction and focus of the Husky Club should help to reduce any of the present confusion. The Board of Advisors and the membership can then more clearly see the challenge and determine the best solution.

4. Redefine and expand the role of the Husky Club Board of Advisors. The success of any business, association, or club has a direct relationship to the roles taken by its leaders and membership. The more active the participation at every level, the better the chance for the accomplishment of the goals of the organization. The leadership must set an example for the general membership. Then, the general membership must be encouraged to assume leadership roles. This kind of leadership is present in the Husky Club now and, with an expansion of the role of the Board of Advisors, a new level of Husky Club achievement can be reached. This expanded level of active participation is crucial to the success of the Husky Club.

5. Enhance everyone's opportunity to communicate. This communication must include a wider population by expanding the Husky Club's body of constituents. The club must not only get the word of the Husky Club and its activities out to the Bloomsburg University community, but it must also encourage responses from those constituents. In order to accomplish this, not only must the circle of Husky Club participants grow, but also the Board of Advisors and the Executive Director must listen to the concerns from both inside and outside the organization. This requires two-way communication. Both sides of the conversation must be stimulated.

In this atmosphere of new and increased communication, the Board and I encourage all of you to contact us with any and all comments, concerns, compliments, complaints, or ideas. The Husky Club telephone number is (717) 389-4663. Our office is located in the Development Office in Carver Hall. This column is, first and foremost, designed to solicit your opinions about the goals for the Husky Club and the means for their accomplishment. The Board and I hope this information will stir your thinking, and we urge you to get involved in a very competitive and successful athletic program via the Husky Club.

Four join Hall of Fame ranks

Four alumni were inducted into the BU Athletic Hall of Fame on September 29, bringing the total number to 25. The hall was instituted in 1982.

This year's recipients of the university's highest athletic honor were Franklin "Ed" Jones '54 of Philadelphia, Richard Lichtel '68 of Camp Hill, Edward Schuyler '24 of Bloomsburg, and Frank VanDevender '39 of Shamokin.

FRANKLIN "ED" JONES '54. A native of Milton, Jones was a member of the Huskies' football and basketball teams from 1946 to 1950 and was the university's freshman basketball coach in 1953-1954 upon returning from military service to complete his degree in elementary education.

As a member of the basketball squad, he was a four-year starter and earned All-Pennsylvania State Teachers College recognition in three seasons. Jones played both center and forward and served as the Huskies' captain for three years under head coaches Pete Wisher and Harold Shelley. In football, the two-way performer under Hall of Fame coach Robert Redman played offensive and defensive end and helped the club through its best era. During his four seasons, the Huskies had a record of 27-6-1, including a mark of 9-0 in 1948, one of only two football teams in Bloomsburg history to register an undefeated campaign.

Following his collegiate playing days, Jones played two seasons of semi-professional football for the Ashland Miners and three seasons of basketball at the same level with the Williamsport Bills and Berwick Car Builders of the Eastern League, as well as the Harlem Roadkings. In the military, he was awarded All-Sixth Army honors in football and basketball while serving at Fort Lewis (Washington) and was named to the All-European team when he was stationed in Heidelberg, Germany.

Professionally, Jones has worked in the fields of community, mental health and youth services and is an administrator at a youth detention center in Philadelphia.

RICHARD LICHEL '68. As a key member of BU's football team for three seasons from 1965 to 1967, Lichtel established 24 single-game, season and career school records, 17 of which still stand. During his tenure as the Huskies' starting quarterback, Lichtel helped the team to a record of 14-11 after the club posted losing records in seven of the previous nine years.

He passed for 4,953 yards and 43 touchdowns, while completing 332 of 651 passes in his career, all university records until recent seasons. He averaged 14.9 yards per completion and threw for an average of 215.3 yards per game in 25 starts. His senior season, 1967, proved to be his best when he completed 189 of 415 passes for 2,771 yards and 26 touchdowns and averaged 307.8 passing yards per contest.

A majority of his passes that season went in the direction of teammate Bob Tucker, who had 77 catches for 1,325 yards and 10 touchdowns. The reception total is still a national, single-season record for light ends. Tucker, a former player in the National Football League with the New York Giants and Minnesota Vikings, is also a member of the university's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Lichtel also set several single-game marks in his final year including 32 completions and five touchdowns in games against Lock Haven and Mansfield. In the latter contest, he threw for 360 yards in a 42-37 Bloomsburg victory.

Following graduation, Lichtel played in the semi-professional ranks for three seasons with the Harrisburg Capitols and Scranton Miners while serving as a member of the faculty and coaching staffs at Mechanicsburg High School. He took over the head coaching duties at Mechanicsburg and just completed his ninth season, entering the campaign with an overall record of 61-30-2, including a PIAA District III AAAA title in 1986 when his club posted a 10-3 mark.

EDWARD F. SCHUYLER '24. A well-known sports writer, Schuyler covered local and regional sports for many years — including all of the university's athletic teams — as a member of the staff of The Morning Press in Bloomsburg, now known as the Press-Enterprise. The first sporting event he covered for the newspaper was an amateur football game in Danville in the fall of 1923 while he was still a student at the Bloomsburg State Normal School.

That summer he was assigned as a full-time member of the staff to cover a local professional baseball league. After serving in many capacities, including sports editor, he was named acting editor in 1944 and took over the position on a permanent basis in 1947 until his retirement in 1970. In addition, he covered the local county and municipal courts during his 47-year professional career.

Schuyler's popular sports column, "Fanning," included comments and stories on many of the university's athletes including several current members of the Hall of Fame and also this year's inductees.

Schuyler was presented with a Distinguished Service Award in 1970 by the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association and is an honorary life member of the organization. He is a former secretary of the association and has been very active with church activities and the local Kiwanis.

FRANK VAN DEVENDER '39. This inductee's inclusion this year is especially notable because the university is celebrating its Sesquicentennial, and he was a 1939 graduate, which was Bloomsburg's 100th year. He was a member of the school's basketball, football and track and field teams, but his most notable feats were accomplished in the latter sport.

He ran sprints for the squad from 1935 to 1939, helping the team to go undefeated in all regular-season dual meets and to capture the Pennsylvania State Teachers College Conference title three consecutive times. He was unbeaten as a quarter-miler in his college career. In leading the Huskies to the conference meet crown from 1937-1939, he was the leading individual scorer in the event all three years, winning several races.

The "Flying Van" was an eight-time conference champion and set records in the 100-yard dash (9.7 seconds) and low hurdles (24.5 seconds); the latter held up for 21 years. He won the 440 yard race and finished second in the 220 in his freshman season and duplicated the feat, in addition to winning the high hurdles, in 1937 when the team won its first title. Three first place finishes in the 220, high hurdles and low hurdles helped the team win a second crown in his junior season, and he set the conference records as a senior winning the 100, low hurdles, while placing second in the 220 and high hurdles. He amassed 280 points in the conference meet in four years.

VanDevender also was part of the Bloomsburg contingent at the prestigious Penn Relays for four seasons and helped the Huskies make some outstanding showings. In 1938 and 1939, Bloomsburg won a college relay against some top-notch competition from the eastern U.S.

Prior to coming to Bloomsburg, the standout was a PIAA District Four champion in 1935 in the 100 and 200 yard dashes for Shamokin High School in the annual event held that season in Mt. Carmel.

After graduation from Bloomsburg, he joined the faculty at Shamokin and served in many capacities, including elementary school principal from 1955 to 1973 and district superintendent from 1973 until his retirement in 1978.

Alumna visited Germany in 1939

By Helen Weaver Ditty '38

There were 50 of us representing the Youth of the Penna. Sabbath School Association. Rev. E.H. Bonsal, Jr., director, was our leader. The World Conference was to be held in Amsterdam, Holland. I had graduated from Bloomsburg Teachers College and had taught a year, and now a trip to Europe. I was exuberant.

Our ship was the Nieuw Amsterdam, a brand new ship on the Holland America Line. It had just made its maiden voyage. We felt a bit uneasy as the tugs pulled her out of the New York harbor and the shore line of America drifted away. There were 1175 passengers - many were delegates to the conference from other states as well as the 50 from Penna.

We explored the wonderful facilities of the boat like kids on a picnic. Imagine - a swimming pool on a boat. We were serious about our mission, though, and attended study groups on conference material. We hoped that by all the young people of the world getting to know each other better in Christian Fellowship, we might be able to prove the futility of war and bring peace to the world.

It took us five days to cross the Atlantic. We landed at Plymouth, England and toured southern England and London. Some of us took a train north to New Castle, crossed the North Sea to Oslo. We took a train over the mountains to Sweden and Stockholm. We marvelled at the fiords and enjoyed Skansen and Tivoli. We took a boat train to Denmark and from there we went into Hitler's Germany. We were hearing a lot about this dynamic German leader. We even saw one of his aides, Goering, at a train station. A lot of people were around him, throwing flowers to him.

We were to spend the night in Hamburg and go the next day to Holland to meet the rest of our group for the conference. However, our reservations for a hotel had been cancelled because of a Hitler Youth Rally the next day, so we decided to take a night train directly to Amsterdam. We were all very tired as we struggled into the already crowded train. Some of us even climbed into the luggage rack above the seats. Smartly dressed Hitler police checked passports and didn't even see some of us behind the suitcases.

In Holland some of us stayed in private homes. Another girl, Ruth and I stayed with a Westra family on Johannes Vimeer St. They could not speak English but Ruth and the lady both knew some French. They would converse and she would tell her family what they said in Dutch and Ruth would tell me in English. There were humorous misunderstandings, but over it all an aura of Christian Fellowship. We smiled a lot.

The city gave us transportation passes that would take us anywhere. How nice. We explored the Clock Towers and bicycled in top of the dikes. In some places people still wore wooden shoes and white hats with wings.

There were young people from all over the world at the conference. Discussion groups were based on language. Speakers spoke in their own language, but copies in French, German, English and Spanish were handed out. We found that all of us had the same interests and goals - to find a good means of making a living, to find the right mate, of having homes and families and to help bring peace to a war weary world. We felt the shadows of war over the assembly and grieved for it.

At the last meeting we saluted each other by performing something representative of our countries. There were folk dances, songs and skits. The United States delegation sang "Home on the Range". At the Sunday morning service we had communion together. Colors of all races blended together. There was a Japanese boy on one side of me and a Swedish girl on the other. "Christus Victor" was the theme of the conference. We were all swept up in an aura of enthusiasm and emotion. We shook hands and there were tears as we parted - knowing full well that in a short time we would be fighting against each other in yet another war. We had hoped to convince the world that war is not the answer.

After the conference some of us took a bus tour that would take us up the Rhine River, through Bavarian cities, over the Alps, down through Italy and finally up through France and home. This was the time of "Sound of Music" and "Winds of War". In some places in Germany our cameras were taken from us and returned later. We may even have smelled the concentration camps, though then, no one in their wildest imagination would have believed what was really going on. The kindly German people were caught up in the Hitler trap as much as anyone.

Some of the German people would try to talk to our group to find out what was really going on. Their government controlled press would only tell them what it wanted them to know. We visited castles on the Rhine and many beautiful cities such as Cologne and Munich. We climbed the Alps and threw snow balls at each other in August.

We finally went through France to Paris. There you could really feel the fear of war. They were sand bagging the Louve and removing art treasures. Our busses were confiscated to haul troops. We finally arrived at Cologne, France, where our beautiful Nieuw Amsterdam waited for us.

People with any Jewish blood were desperate to get out of Europe. They were offering all kinds of money for boat passage to America. Some of our group wanted to take advantage of the offers, but Bonnie was adamant and said NO. He was anxious to get all his charges safely home.

Our boat was the last to make a normal passage home. We blacked out as we crossed the English Channel and had to be very careful of mines. Another boat, the Alienia, was sunk on the way home. Some people back home thought that was the boat I was on and were worried about me.

It was good to see the Statue of Liberty emerge from the mists early that Sept. morning in 1939. My boy friend, Wm. Ditty and my parents Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Weaver were there to meet me. Bill and I were married the following year by Bonnie in his Swathmore church. We had seven children and our years together were a chronicle of the times. There were tremendous technological advancements in all areas. There were depressions and wars. One of our sons served in the Navy and another in the Air Force in the Vietnam era wars.

A few years ago I revisited Europe - this time going by jet in five hours instead of five days. How terrible the bombings had been. Two thirds of Munich had been destroyed or damaged. They were still painstakingly restoring one of the churches. I felt like crying out "I didn't do it." We realized that we were all victims of the mad man Hitler. I was glad to see that the Plaza and the Clock Tower in Munich were still there. A beautiful part of the new Munich was the Olympic Park where the 1972 Olympics were held.

So the tides of time move in and out. Life seems like a giant chess board where the pieces make their own moves - but over it all is a master hand sort of maneuvering it all - the pieces can only go as far as He will let them. It is good to know that He is in final control.

I am a widow now and don't travel much anymore. At 72 I tire more easily and all the steps seem steeper. There is so much that is exciting in our great and changing universe. I feel a compulsion to write it all down. There are so many friends to make, good books to read and quilts to quilt. I am involved in an adult literacy program that I find rewarding. I am blessed with caring children and grandchildren.

Maybe God has a heavenly computer, where all our actions and values are entered in as data. When we die, perhaps He presses the total button and we find out how we rate in His eyes and what our eternal destiny will be - where surely there will be no more wars and people will finally live in love and peace.

I wonder what the young people today will be remembering fifty years from now.

Interactive video project wins award

An interactive video project designed by BU's Institute for Interactive Technologies program received a bronze "Cindy Award" at this year's 1989 Cindy Competition Interactive Video Showcase.

BU's entry, titled "Attributes for Successful Employability," was awarded a bronze plaque at the competition. "Attributes" was selected by the judges as one of the 29 blue ribbon finalists considered for a Cindy Award this year. There were 65 total entries.

The IV showcase was held in conjunction with the Association of Visual Communicators' corporate video conference held in November in Los Angeles. It was sponsored by the International Interactive Communicators Society and featured hands-on demonstrations of the best interactive video productions from around the nation.

"Attributes" was developed at BU for the Harrison School District of Colorado Springs, Colorado. It is used as an instrument to help high school instructors teach employability and job retention skills to their students seeking entry-level occupations.

The experimental learning program consists of four modules - dependability, quality and quantity, positive attitude and working well with others - that can be used in the classroom as an educational tool to help increase job retention and work performance of prospective employees.

Harold J. "Hank" Bailey, a professor of mathematics and computer science and director of the institute, and Susan Klinsing, a former vocational coordinator for the Harrison School District, were co-producers of "Attributes." Camille Price, a consultant to the university's IIT program, served as chief script writer and production coordinator.

According to Bailey, Cindy Awards' judges do not consider a project's sponsorship or budget.

"Our project was in competition for gold, silver, bronze or honorable mention awards with corporate and industry projects costing two to 10 times as much money to produce," Bailey noted. Bailey said "Attributes" was financed by federal and state grant monies allocated to the Harrison schools and from funds made available through The Actna Institute of Hartford, Connecticut, and the Ben Franklin Partnership Program in Pennsylvania.

Approximately 250 people from Colorado and Pennsylvania, including BU faculty, staff and students, volunteered their time to assist in the production of "Attributes."

Bailey and Price concurred that producing "Attributes" has proved beneficial to the university and the greater Bloomsburg community.

"Developing this project has demonstrated that our IIT program graduates are as good as those from any college or university," Bailey said.

Dedication recognizes all veterans

By ELWOOD WAGNER '43

Homecoming was a glorious day — parade, picnic, soccer game, a big win for the Husky football team, dinner-dance, and the dedication of the Veterans Memorial Garden. Under bright sunshine, with temperatures in the high seventies, the garden on the front lawn of the Fenstermaker Alumni House was dedicated with fanfare. Appropriate music was provided by the Catawissa Military Band; flags of the Armed Forces fluttered in the soft breeze; an American Flag which once flew over the sunken battleship Arizona was raised; a volley was fired; a wreath was laid at the memorial stone by the Alumni Association's Executive Board; and speeches were made.

Dr. Curt English '56 acted as master of ceremonies; Boyd Buckingham '43 offered the invocation; Dr. Harry Ausprich, president of the University, greeted the attendees; I gave a short history of the Veterans Memorial/Recognition Project; and Dr. John F. Magill's dedicatory speech stirred the emotions of those in attendance.

We were pleased that Dr. James H. McCormick, former president of Bloomsburg University and now chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, and Mrs. McCormick were an honored guest. It was most fitting that David McCormick, son of Dr. McCormick, accompanied his parents. David, a fairly recent graduate of the Military Academy at West Point, is an officer in the airborne forces at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The Council of Trustees was represented by Stanley G. Rakowsky '70, chairperson.

Except for a few minor details, part one of the Veterans Memorial/Recognition Project is now complete. However, we still need financial assistance from alumni and friends to complete payments on the Memorial Garden. We call upon each of you who cherish FREEDOM (the theme of the garden) to contribute and honor those Bloomsburg graduates and former students who made the supreme sacrifice.

The building of the Veterans Memorial Garden was a labor of love for the committee and, as such, the reward of praise that was showered on us by many of the attendees before and after the dedication, was more than we expected to receive. If you have not seen the garden, take time to visit it the next time you are in Bloomsburg and evaluate our efforts.

Part two of the project, collecting biographical information on all Bloomsburg graduates and former students who served on active duty in the armed forces since 1839, was launched several months ago. Unfortunately, the form to collect the information was inadvertently omitted from the summer edition of The Alumni Quarterly. It is included in this issue, and we encourage all veterans to complete and submit this form. We also request that anyone whose father, grandfather, great-grandfather, etc. who once attended Bloomsburg University and who served on active duty in the armed forces, submit a form no matter how sketchy the information might be. The Gold Star Book and the Books of Service, in which these forms will be placed, will serve as a compendium to the history of Bloomsburg University.

Part three, the first Veterans Memorial Scholarship in the amount of $1,000 will be awarded in April 1990. The eligibility requirements were formulated by the committee on November 11 and approved by the Alumni Board of Directors on that date. We are building an endowment to support the awarding of the annual scholarship, and we solicit your assistance in this endeavor.

Please complete the form below and send your contribution for either the Veterans Memorial Garden or the Veterans Memorial Scholarship to: Veterans Memorial/Recognition Project, Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. Checks should be made payable to the BU Foundation/Veterans Memorial Garden, or BU Foundation/Veterans Memorial Scholarship.

BLOOMSBURG UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

VETERANS MEMORIAL AND RECOGNITION PROGRAM

In order to recognize all graduates and former students who answered the call to arms to preserve our way of life, we are requesting that graduates, former students, or family members complete this form to assist us in compiling a lasting record of all who served on active duty in the armed forces during war or peace since the founding of our University in 1839. Completed forms will be placed in a Gold Star Book or Book of Service and will be on display in the library of the Fenstermaker Alumni House.

Please type or print applicable information and mail this form to: Veterans Memorial and Recognition Program, Bloomsburg University Alumni Association, Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg, PA 17815

Benyo's trip has its high and low plunged down nearly 100 switchbacks on our way to Trail Camp at 12,000 feet. Here the Nolte boys had a tent pitched for just such an emergency.

My exhaustion from the previous three desert days predisposed me to hypothermia, and wading through rivulets of icy water on the way to camp left me shivering and weak. After my crew dressed me in a sleeping bag, we waited out the worst of the storm.

Eventually, I warmed enough to make a forced march off the mountain to get food, fluids and some sleep.

CRAWFORD HAD DONE HIS

ASCENT the day before in ideal weather. He completed the 146-mile first leg to the summit in 55:08, the best of his three one-way attempts. He then descended, slept in Lone Pine, and continued on his return leg.

Unfortunately, his ambitious pace set him up for an inability to keep up with his hydration, which he theorizes damaged his kidney walls. This put a temporary stop to his efforts. He sat in a folding chair by the road, watching the storm on top of Whitney — knowing I was probably in the midst of it — while he rehydrated.

When he felt better, he walked an hour, then sat again for an hour, while his crew ministered to him. He was facing 40 mph head winds, upset stomach, and a cumulative pace of little more than one mph.

Soon Crawford revived enough to move into the head winds, and continue on toward Panamint Valley. He eventually would complete the course in 126 hours, 34 minutes (five days, six hours and 34 minutes). "The high point of the whole experience was crossing the finish line," he says.

MY OWN TRIP TOOK LONGER, 170 hours, 58 minutes (seven days, two hours and 58 minutes) to be exact.

At some point on the previous day's descent from Whitney summit, I had banged my right shin against a rock. Now every time my right foot hit the road, a sharp pain shot through it. I managed only 39 miles that day, calling a halt some 96 miles from the finish line.

Next morning, I found that an analgesic dulled the sharp points of the pain, and a 10-ounce bottle of juice every two miles helped the doses of carbohydrate-replacement drinks keep my sugar level up. I made 44 tough miles that day.

Eventually the return trip's most overwhelming force became just plain fatigue: too little sleep plus too many hard miles. On the morning of my seventh day, near Stovepipe Wells, I began unraveling.

Finished with his race, Crawford came by to help. He suggested I go eight more miles, to within 35 miles of the finish, catch some sleep at Furnace Creek, and then return to the course after dark.

It worked. The night temperature stayed above 100 degrees, but by maintaining a heavy sugar intake and by concentrating on the lonely road with its canopy of stars, I managed to get past Furnace Creek by the time the sun rose to ignite another 124-degree day.

A FEW MINUTES BEFORE 9 A.M., I crossed a finish line my crew had made from a roll of toilet paper, and entered the parking lot at Badwater.

Here I was greeted by an emotional Crawford. He and I had become the first runners to do the Death Valley-to-Mount Whitney course in both directions.

But we had one last move to our madness.

Tom loaded me in his car, and my crew members jumped into their vehicles, and we got out of Death Valley as fast as we legally could. At a motel in Bishop, I entered a room, turned on the air conditioning and the TV, propped up my swollen legs and ravaged feet, and drank a beer while watching "Leave It To Beaver." I had successfully returned to the "real world."

Orchestra sponsors cruise

The University-Community Orchestra will sponsor a seven-day cruise to the Caribbean isles of St. Thomas, San Juan and Labadee next summer aboard the Royal Caribbean Cruise Line's "Sovereign of the Seas."

The cruise is scheduled for August 4 to 11 and is open to all. Unlike last summer's Sesquicentennial Cruise, the orchestra will not perform.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER — Former astronaut Scott Carpenter was keynote speaker during the Environmental Symposium, "Global Change and Our Endangered Environment — From Planet Earth to Pennsylvania," on October 17.

Alumni, friends attend reception in Williamsport

On November 14 representatives of the university visited Williamsport to let BU alumni and community leaders know what is happening at the university and what it has to offer. At the present time, Lycoming County is home to 782 alumni and 313 students.

Representing the university were Dr. Harry Ausprich, president; John L. Walker, vice president for university advancement; Dr. Carol Matteson, dean of the College of Business; Dr. Michael Vavrek, dean of extended programs; Roy Smith, director of experiential learning (which includes the popular Quest program); Anthony Ianiero, assistant vice president for development; George Mitchell, director of affirmative action; David Poch, senior vice president of Commonwealth Bank in Williamsport and a member of the BU Foundation board of directors; John Dorla, former chairperson of the BU Council of Trustees and a new member of the BU Foundation board; Andy Cannon, administrative director for athletic development; Lisa Stackhouse and Sharon Siegrist, Husky Ambassadors; and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of Alumni Affairs.

Symposium has national audience

A two-day, 33-hour symposium on environmental issues aimed at changing the way people live and think about their environment and its future was a highlight of fall Sesquicentennial activities on campus. Entitled "Global Change and Our Endangered Environment: From Pennsylvania to Planet Earth," the symposium featured former astronaut Scott Carpenter as the keynote speaker.

"In these times of serious concerns about the future of our national resources, members of our university community wanted to celebrate our birthdate by providing a unique learning opportunity for all of our constituent groups," said Sheryl R. Bryson, director of university relations and communication.

The first day was delivered by video teleconference to 18 sites in the United States and Canada, enabling speakers and panelists to discuss and define global environmental problems.

Joining the teleconference live from Washington, D.C., were Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee and Congressman Paul Kanjorski of the 11th District. Nearly two dozen state and national experts on environment issues were on campus to participate in the two-day symposium.

Memorial honors all veterans

A memorial honoring Bloomsburg University alumni and former students who have served in the Armed Services since 1839 was dedicated at the Fenstermaker Alumni House on Homecoming Day. The dedication program was preceded by a 20-minute concert by the Catawissa Military Band, which includes a number of BU alumni.

Dr. Curtis R. English '56, a retired captain in the U.S. Navy and former member of the BU Alumni Board of Directors, was the master of ceremonies. He introduced the special guests, including Chancellor and Mrs. James H. McCormick and President and Mrs. Harry Ausprich.

Principal speaker for the impressive ceremony was Dr. John F. Magill Jr. '48, who was the inspiration for the memorial project. It was because of his urging several years ago that the Alumni Board initiated plans for a memorial/tribute.

Located on the front lawn of the Fenstermaker Alumni House on Lightstreet Road, the memorial consists of a flag pole surrounded by a circular flagstone walkway, a marble monument bearing an inscription and seals of the five branches of the Armed Services, and five Giverny teak benches.

"The memorial was made possible by generous gifts from the Class of 1939 and the Class of 1963," according to Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the Alumni Association.

Four of the five benches have been provided through gifts from Marion Wallace States '43, Wilmer and Lois

Nester '49, Dr. Harold "Pat" O'Brien '35 and Colonel Harry D. Jenkins, USAF retired.

Over $5,000 is still needed to pay for the project, Mrs. Klemkosky noted. Contributions may be sent to Veterans Memorial, Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

The project also includes the compilation of books of valor and honor, which will be placed on display in the Alumni House, and the establishment of a scholarship fund for the children of veterans as a living memorial.

Members of the Veterans Memorial and Recognition Committee are Col. Elwood M. Wagner '43, USAF retired, Andrew F. Magill '43, John W. Thomas '47, Millard C.

Ludwig '48, Dale A. Krothe '60, Gary Seynour '71, Magill and English.

New choral work premier

"Bells," a new choral work by Bernard Rands, was performed by the Sesquicentennial Chorus and the Northeastern Pennsylvania Philharmonic on November 17. The work was jointly commissioned by the Philharmonic and Bloomsburg University in celebration of the university's 150th anniversary.

Rands' music has gained international recognition and has established him as a major figure among today's generation of composers. He has received numerous awards, including a Pulitzer Prize in 1984 for his work, "Canti del Sole," for tenor and orchestra.

Hugh Keelan conducted the Philharmonic, and William Decker of the BU music department directed the chorus.

Art competition part of celebration

A national judged works on paper competition was held in the fall as part of the university's Sesquicentennial celebration. An opening reception was held on October 9, followed by "Poetry Politics in Painting," a slide presentation by jurors Rudolf Baranik and May Stevens.

Stevens is a painter on the faculty at the School of Visual Arts in New York. She works in the collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the New Museum of Contemporary Art, the Brooklyn Museum and the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.

Rudolf Baranik, artist and writer, is a professor of art at Pratt Institute in New York. He works in collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Hirshhorn Museum, the New Museum of Contemporary Art and the Moderna Museet in Sweden.

The competition was open to any artist working in the United States. Of the 780 entries received, 75 invitations were extended to various artists. A minimum of $5,000 in cash and purchase awards was given to works selected by Bloomsburg University for its permanent art collection.

VIEWERS' CHOICE — The entry of Michael A. Chyko won first place in the Bloomsburg Community category and captured the most votes of those who viewed the cakes.

Winning entries in contest reflect creativity, skill

Even though rain moved the celebration indoors, spirits were high for the 150th birthday party on October 17. Over 33 cakes in various categories were displayed throughout the day in the Kehr Union.

The cakes were judged on idea, neatness, cake being totally covered, amount of work required to complete the cake, and the skills and abilities needed to create the entry. Winners in the various categories included:

Grades K to First — Melinda Lou Hill, first; Kelley Kane and Karen Kluskie, second; Jaime Quinn and Mike Caristo, third.

University Students — Patricia Baehser, first; Elwell Hall Council, second; Lavamare Holmka, third.

Bloomsburg Community — Michael A. Chyko, first; Dawn Colosimo, second; Angie Clark, third.

Senior Citizens — Al B. Shulski, first; Anel A. Eisenhower St., second.

Alumni — Mary Anne Klemkosky, first.

Faculty and Staff — Lou Ann Tarlesky, first.

Those viewing the cakes voted for the cake they liked best. The viewers' choice was created by Michael A. Chyko. President and Mrs. Harry Ausprich cut this cake to start the birthday party at 4:30 p.m.

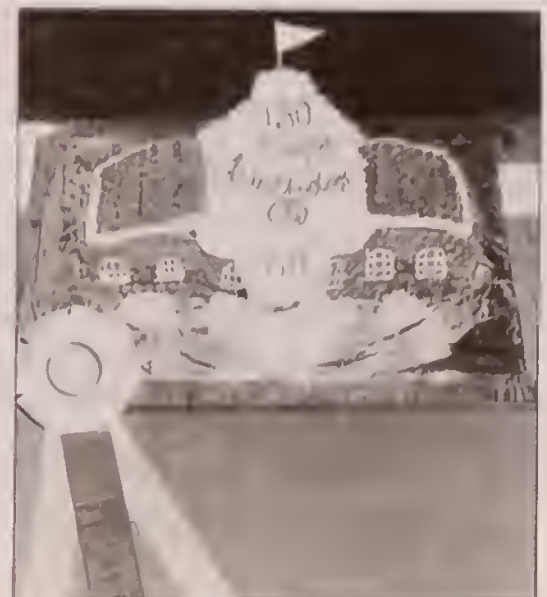

Professional bakers who donated cakes for this event were Dalo's Bakery, Herwick; M. W. Wood, the BU Dining Service; Strausser's Bakery, Berwick; Hotel Magee, Bloomsburg; and The Bloomsburg Hospital.

Prizes were donated by Wise Foods/Horden, Herwick; Conant Beverages, Herwick; Maistan Industries, Inc., Philadelphia; Breisch's Dairy, Bloomsburg. Others donating were Laubach Auto Parts, Student Activities, M. W. Wood, Ralph Dillon Flowers, Dr. Stephen Wallace, WHUQ and Wilson Enterprises, Inc.

Committee members were Linda Lou Hill, Tim Ail, Lorraine Ausprich, Mary Anne Klemkosky, Jimmy Gilliland, Anna Mae Lehr, Robert Wislock, Oliver J. Larmi, Anne O'Brien and Sallie Edwards.

ALUMNI CATEGORY — Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the Alumni Association, earned first place in the alumni category.

CARVER HALL — This three-dimensional rendition of Carver Hall captured first place for Patricia Baehser in the University Students category.

Mary Ellen Derr '60 died Nov 16, 1989 at age 49. She was a business teacher in the Bloomsburg School District since 1961. In addition to her parents she is survived by a daughter, son and a brother.

Barbara Walnwright Van Scoy '60 has been named a 1989 English Teacher of Excellence by the New York State English Council. She is a teacher in the Riverhead Central School District.

Recognition as an outstanding English educator by NYSERC is a most distinguished honor. A teacher must first be nominated by a colleague and then receive three letters of recommendation: one letter each from an administrator, a peer, and a student. This year, the NYSERC theme, "The Literate Professional," determined the selection criteria.

Bathia was recognized as a teacher who, through example, has encouraged a love of literature and language in students, has facilitated student learning and has enriched student lives.

Dr. William J. Jurkiewicz '60 was honored recently for his participation in a "Forum on Extraordinary Teaching" held during the American Association for Higher Education's National Conference. He is presently a professor of biology at Millersville University.

Jeff has been a teacher in the Herwick Area School District for 28 years.

Dorothy Hyde '61 retired from the Shikellamy School District after nearly three decades of teaching first and second grade.

Andy Latavee '61 and Bill Kuhns '62, assistant professors at Cabrini College in Radnor, received the college's Honorary Alumna Award, given annually to persons who exemplify the ideals of the school's founders, St. Frances Xavier Cabrini.

"This was the first time the alumni association gave out a dual award, but we felt that these lifetime friends, who have imparted their love and concern for children to all Cabrini education majors, deserved recognition," said Martha Dale, Director of Alumni Affairs and the Annual Fund.

The duo attended Milton Hershey High School in Hershey together and both went on to Bloomsburg State College. Graduation from college did not bring about a parting of the ways for these two friends. Both pursued graduate degrees at Temple University.

After receiving master's degrees, they accepted teaching positions at different schools. Kuhns taught elementary school in Bucks County. Latavee spent six years in the Centennial School District in Warminster.

They were reunited in 1968 when Kuhns joined Latavee as a faculty member in the education department at Cabrini. "For the past 20 years, education majors have been instructed and guided by these two wonderful men. It is no accident that Cabrini College graduates teachers who are so well-respected in the educational community," said Dr. Mary Ann Biller, Vice President of Academic Affairs.

Bill Kuhns lives in Hatfield with his wife Barbara and two children, Kevin and Krista. His hobbies include genealogy, chess and stamp collecting.

Sidekick Andy Latavee and his wife Patricia live in Lansdale.

James D. Sproull '68 is recipient of a 1989 Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching. The White House announced that Sproull was among 112 dedicated and talented middle, junior and senior high school teachers from across the country so honored.

Sproull is a science and earth science teacher at McLean High School in McLean, Va. He resides in Vienna, Va.

Since 1983, the Presidential Awards for Excellence program has recognized and congratulated outstanding teachers. Awardees demonstrate that they can motivate all students to learn mathematics and the sciences. They also set long term professional goals for themselves and maintain a thorough, current knowledge of the subjects they teach.

While in Washington, D.C., the teachers were honored at a Department of State banquet and at a National Academy of Sciences reception. They also participated in an honors workshop and met with various leaders in American education.

In addition to the Presidential Award itself, Sproull received a $7,500 National Science Foundation grant to be spent under his direction at his school.

Suzan Mazur '69 recently returned to New York City after her third trip to Colombia, currently one of the world's danger spots. She was in Colombia to film a documentary for Japanese TV.

She and photographer George Obremski also recently prepared the lead article, "Visions of the Alto Magdalena," in the current issue of Archaeology Magazine. The article tells of grotesque stoneworks, possible wrought by ancient artists high on hallucinogenic tea, which litter the rugged hill country of southeast Colombia. "To the untutored eye, Colombia's Pre-Hispanic statuary seems perverse and nightmarish," Suzan wrote in the article, "smiling, fang-mouthed heads, faces emerging from the tails of snakes, bat features combined with feline and monkey..." The subject is treated in great depth and probes how drugs could have inspired the art of an ancient people.

On an earlier trip to Colombia, Suzan traveled deep into the hills to Segovia where in 1988 about 50 people were massacred. She also wrote an article for a recent issue of Connoisseur magazine in which she shared a by-line with Ozgen Acar in a story about ancient tombs discovered near the southwestern coast of Turkey.

Next, she wants to travel into the Baltic region of the Soviet Union to discover the people and their heritage in the land of her ancestors.

Cinde Linker '71 was featured in an article in the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader, written by June D. Bell. Excerpts follow:

"If she'd owned a car in college, Cinde Linker would probably be spending her days peering into a microscope.

"But 20 years ago, her only way of getting from her Back Mountain home to the Wilkes College campus was by bus. So five days a week, Linker dropped her change into the coin box and found a seat.

"The medical technology major often sat near mentally disabled adults who were traveling to the United Rehabilitation Services, Inc. workshop. After many bus rides, she began to talk to them.

"Their independence and intelligence shattered her stereotypes of the mentally retarded. Eventually, she changed her major — to special education, and her school — to Bloomsburg University.

"In November, she became the Luzerne Intermediate Unit's special education director, capping 16 years of service to Luzerne County's physically and mentally disabled children."

In her new position, Linker will oversee a program for 7,000 children served by the LIU, with a staff of

Benyo's historic trek defies nature

(Editor's Note: This past summer, Richard Benyo '68 set out to run from Death Valley to the top of Mount Whitney and back. He described his experience in two articles which appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle.)

Once training commenced, however, the English team disintegrated due to business commitments, and Ennis suffered a serious stress fracture in her leg. So it's just Crawford and ol' Benyo.

Realizing there's nowhere quite like Death Valley and neighboring Panamint Valley to Thursday morning so we can stagger up through Whitney's thinning atmosphere, sign in at the top, take the requisite photo at the survival hut and descend as quickly as possible.

At the same time, we hope to be traveling fast enough to reach Whitney's peak in less than 84 hours, which was the time it took Al Arnold of Walnut Creek in 1977 when he became the first solo runner to do the one-way course.

The primary challenges on the return course will be as follows:

- Our bodies will have suffered through two days of the hottest desert heat on Earth, only to be subjected to further abuse from Whitney's altitude and cold.

- Important trace minerals in our bodies will be low, we'll be nursing blisters, our feet will have expanded several shoe sizes, we will be depleted of fluid at a cellular level, we'll be tired and probably cranky, and we'll still have to send our bodies through several more days of desert heat.

- Because the return trip is largely downhill, our thighs will be screaming with pain as we put on the brakes. At the same time, our feet will be sliding forward in shoes tromping on road surfaces of over 200 degrees, thereby aggravating our blister situation.

There's certainly a good chance we'll end up as desert meat, like so many athletes before us. But it's only Monday. The week is still young.

And the run itself...

A physical crisis hit simultaneously for both of us on this ultra run — at opposite ends of the weather scale. I ran into high altitude hail, lightning and cold rain. My running mate Tom Crawford faced a slow motion assault of steady heat that induced bloody urine, nausea, and reduced his top speed to little more than one mile per hour.

Our low points came mid-afternoon on July 20 as Crawford, a Santa Rosa grade school principal, and I — both 43 and old enough to know better — worked at becoming the first athletes ever to travel on foot from Badwater in Death Valley (the hottest, driest and lowest point in the

CRAWFORD AND BENYO

DAY FIVE — Descending from Whitney

Western Hemisphere) to Mount Whitney (at 14,494 feet, the highest point in the contiguous United States) — and then return to the starting point. That's 292 miles.

Athletes had been attempting the first leg (Badwater to Mount Whitney) since 1974. By the end of the July to August window in 1988, a mere 17 had finished the course out of several hundred who tried it.

Crawford was the first ever to do it twice. I'd reported on his 1987 attempt. I'd never tried it, but had trained for this challenge based upon the experience of 32 marathons and six ultra marathons.

BEFORE HITTING MY CRISIS POINT, I had completed the one-way course at 1:23 p.m. on July 20, turning in a time of 79 hours, 23 minutes — by no means a fast time for the course, but far from the slowest.

I had managed to avoid my usual high altitude sickness by drinking carbohydrate-replacement drinks, sipping Mate de Cueva tea from Peru, and pacing myself wisely. My mountain crew (Mike Duncan, plus Carl and Frank Nolte) were taking celebratory photos at Whitney's summit when a threatening storm began to erupt — beneath us.

The first lightning bolt struck 1,500 feet below and to the south. While exiting the exposed mountain top as fast as my bruised and blistered feet could go, we were hit by a rage of hail. By the time we reached Trail Crest, the hailstorm was in a fury, and we

DAY FOUR — Two and a half miles from Whitney's Peak.

Death Valley is the hottest, driest, meanest place on Earth. You can drive up and down the roads here and never see a living thing other than a panting raven with an eye peeled for lizards that had met a nasty end under tires the night before.

Each summer roughly 50 runners apply for permits to go the 146 miles from Badwater to Mount Whitney on foot.

At 282 feet below sea level, Badwater is the lowest point in the Western Hemisphere. The peak of Mount Whitney, at 14,494 feet, is the highest point in the contiguous United States.

Most athletes who have attempted the trek end up regretting it. Since the course was created in 1973, only 17 people have successfully made the passage. Nobody has ever tried to go from Badwater to Whitney and then turn around and return. By the time you read this, we should be on our way.

THIS FIRST DOUBLE SHOT at the course we're making came on a dare after a 1987 race between English teammates Eleanor Adams and Kenneth Crutchlow and Americans Tom Crawford and Jean Ennis, both of Santa Rosa. Crutchlow had challenged Crawford to race in 1987; Crawford turned around and doubled the distance for 1989.

Each team added a third person, with yours truly joining Crawford and Ennis.

put in the necessary heat training, we spent the four days over the Fourth of July camping at Panamint Springs while notching 20 miles of roadwork every day in a last, desperate attempt to acquaint our bodies with the kind of heat and wind they will have to endure.

For the first two days, we did five out-and-back four-mile legs on Panamint Valley Road, carrying excess carbohydrate replacement drinks and Shaklee's new Performance concoction, and quaffing Calistogas at truck-stops to bring on the belch that would release distressing stomach gases.

We exercised roughly five hours per day in heat that ranged from 114 to 120 degrees. On the third day a crew member joined us, and we went over to Death Valley to put in 20 miles between Stovepipe Wells and Furnace Creek in 123 degrees. On the Fourth of July, we ran down Panamint Valley toward Trona, then turning around and heading back to Panamint Springs in heat that almost topped 116.

OUR STRATEGY for the out-and-back challenge is a simple one: to advance conservatively so that by the time we reach Mount Whitney we are fresh as two guys can be after spending two days crossing three deserts and ascending two 5,000-foot passes. We hope to reach Whitney Portal early on Howard B. Johnson '72 has received a six-year appointment to Bloomsburg University's Council of Trustees by Gov. Robert P. Casey. His term became effective in June and does not expire until January 1995.

A resident of Exton, Johnson earned a B.A. degree in sociology. During his collegiate years, he lettered in basketball for three seasons, served as the Huskies' co-captain and was selected to the All-Conference and NAIA All-American teams in 1971 and 1972.

"We are pleased that Governor Casey selected Mr. Johnson for this prestigious position on our Council of Trustees," said Bloomsburg President Harry Auspich. "As a former student-athlete of this institution, Mr. Johnson has first-hand knowledge of the academic and social structure of the university. He will provide our administration with insight and information that will help the university maintain its margin of excellence."

Johnson is employed as a marketing representative for Decision Data Computer Corporation, an IBM affiliate, at Springhouse, PA. He is responsible for marketing the company's products to commercial, government and education accounts in four southeastern Pennsylvania counties: Berks, Chester, Lancaster and Schuylkill, and throughout the state of Delaware.

Following his graduation from Bloomsburg, Johnson worked from 1972 to 1973 as assistant housing manager for the Wilmington (Del.) Housing Authority. He was a court representative for the Glen Mills (Pa.) School from 1973 to 1977 and was executive director of the West Philadelphia Youth Counseling Center from 1978 to 1980.

Johnson, a 1968 graduate of William Penn High School in New Castle, Del., began his marketing career in 1981. He worked for more than three years as a marketing representative for IBM Corporation at Radnor, Pa. In 1985, he was hired as an account representative for Datagraphix, Inc., of Willow Grove, Pa., where he worked prior to his present employment at Decision Data.

TKE golfs for fund

The second annual Robert McCarty Memorial Golf Tournament, sponsored by the Pi-Beta Alumni Association of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, raised over $1,000 for the scholarship fund in memory of McCarty. The TKE brother was a senior marketing major at the time he died in a car accident near his hometown of York in July 1986.

Over 40 alumni, undergraduates and guests participated in the 18-hole competition at Pickering Valley Golf Course in Phoenixville, which was coordinated by Robert McCullough. Placing first in the sudden death playoff was Mark Emswiler '87, followed by Don Getty '88, second, and Michael Morgan '87, third.

After the exciting finish, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. McCarty, Robert's parents, presented James Rohrbach with a $150 scholarship. A senior public relations major, James has been active in the CGA, TKE and has performed in two Bloomsburg Players productions.

The Pi-Beta Alumni Association was formed in 1987 as a sub organization of the BU Alumni Association. According to Stephen Rohrbach, president, "The associate creates a strong network for our fraternity alumni to communicate with fellow graduates as well as be active with the university community."

In addition to sponsoring several events for TKE alumni, the association has established three scholarships for TKE brothers.

Russ Houk, who died June 29, 1988, was honored posthumously at the 83rd annual convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for his "notable contribution to sports that earned him the warm friendship and high esteem of his collegiate associates throughout the nation."

A resolution adopted by the convention read as follows: "For his faithful service to his institution and higher education, his valuable contributions to intercollegiate athletics, and his wholesome influence upon the lives of young men. Be it known that the membership of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, assembled in annual convention, resolved that this memorial be inscribed in honor and fond remembrance of Russell Eugene Houk."

Women's soccer gets varsity status

Varsity status has been granted to women's soccer, beginning in 1990, according to Mary Gardner, athletic director. The addition of the sport will give the Huskies' program a total of nine varsity teams for women.

The women's soccer club is currently in its second year of existence under the direction of coach Chuck Laudermitch, a member of the university's faculty for the past 12 years.
